Six Nations businessman cleared on all charges

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON- A federal court jury has acquitted Six Nations businessman Ken Hill of all charges related to an alleged cigarette trafficking scheme.

After a week long hearing here the jury cleared Hill of 16 related charges in which the U.S. State's attorney's office tried to claim Hill, was part of a scheme aimed at avoiding paying Washington state taxes.

Hill is one of the founding partners in Grand River Enterprises, Six Nations largest private employer.

The jury's unanimous decision came down last Wednesday.

"Ken Hill was acquitted. All 12 jurors looked at the evidence, and the law that they were charged with by the judge, on the 16 counts. The judge instructed the jury it is your job, and your role to apply the facts to the law based on the evidence they were presented with," said Len Violi, defense lawyer.

"The jury looked at the evidence and said there was no factual basis to the charges against Ken Hill. All 12 agreed," said Violi.

The jury deliberated for two full days before returning an acquittal for Hill. The jury was unable to

Vcr Island First Nation threatens water based blockade of geoduck fishery

By Rebecca Lindell
THE CANADIAN PRESS
VANCOUVER-A Vancouver Island First Nation is threatening to disrupt the geoduck fishery again, saying it will use a flotilla of boats to make it too dangerous for divers to harvest the ugly but profitable shellfish if the federal government reopens the area for commercial activity.

"Our community has just become so frustrated that they asked us to stand up for what they feel is rightfully theirs," said Stz'uminus chief councillor John Elliott.

The water-blockade tactic was first tested when the fishery opened early this month. But the Department of Fisheries and Oceans halted commercial activity for safety reasons, concerned the boats would damage the airlines divers use while digging for the clams.

The First Nation wants full control over a small section of Kulleet Bay, extending from Coffin Point to Yellow Point, and is disputing what the community saw as a lack of consultation before the fishery was opened to commercial divers this year.

Licensed divers have been fishing geoduck in traditional Coast Salish territory for 30 years. Often called elephant-trunk clams, geoducks are large burrowing bivalves easily identified by their long, fleshy, phallic neck that protrudes from an oval-shaped shell.

Divers are allowed to haul in 62,500 pounds of geoduck from B.C.'s waters every year. The clams fetch an average of $10 a pound, said DFO biologist Erin Wylie. They grow in abundance in the northern Pacific, and are largely exported to China.

The First Nation intends to ask the province for sole control over the geoduck fishery in the area, and is upset the waters were opened to reach a verdict on co-defendant Arthur Montour and the corporation NWS.

Local businessman cleared on all "smuggling" charges

Judge Marsha J. Pechman declared a mistrial in the Arthur Montour and NWS case.

Co-defendant Peter Montour, due to ill health did not appear. He has been separated out from the Hill trial and is expected to appear at a later date.

Violi said "Everyone was relieved with the acquittal on Ken Hill." He said he will be calling for a dismissal of charges against co-defendants Arthur Montour and Peter Montour. "The government case is completely unfounded, baseless. They shouldn't have brought these charges. I expect all the charges to receive the same, or experience the same result, either by way of trial, jury or dismissal as a matter of law."

Violi said the three men never should have been charged.

"A court would find there is no basis for the lawsuit and it shouldn't even go to a jury."

"The jury found insufficient evidence. There was no evidence of Ken Hill breaking any law."

"We believe that there is also no evidence of anyone else breaking any laws."

He said he will be filing motions with the court this month asking that the balance of the charges be dismissed.

He said, "the jury, when the judge asked them if they were hung, he asked the forewoman is there anything I can do to help you come to a unanimous decision, she said yes, more evidence."

Violi said that comment indicated "there was a complete lack of evidence to all three men. The state's case is insufficient. It never should have come to a court."

Ironically, the charges came just as Grand River Enterprises has launched a $100 million suit against the United States challenging both big tobacco and the North American Free Trade Agreement.

GRE has already paid almost $4 million in legal fees to take on the U.S. and NAFTA.

In the Hill case the state attorney's office had alleged Hill was part of a conspiracy to supply millions of contraband cigarettes over a five year period to a smoke shop on native land just north of Seattle.

Hill, along with Peter Montour, faced 15 counts of trafficking in contraband cigarettes and one count of conspiracy to traffic in contraband cigarettes.

Each count could have meant up to five years in prison and the possibility of a fine.

The U.S. district Attorney was also seeking a forfeiture order of nearly $5 million U.S., which represents what they claimed was unpaid cigarette taxes.

The jury was unable to reach a verdict on co-defendant Arthur Montour and corporation NWS.

Judge Marsha J. Pechman declared a mistrial in the Arthur Montour and NWS case.

Due to ill health, defendant Peter Montour had been separated out from the other defendants and scheduled for trial at a later date.

Prosecutors have asked the judge to set a new trial date to retry those defendants on which the jury could not reach a verdict, along with Peter Montour.

Additionally, Arthur Montour is charged in a separate case with perjury, for statements he made in a civil case involving forfeiture of cigarettes. That case is scheduled to go to trial in mid September.

Lawyer Len Violi expects all charges against the remaining of the two men to be dismissed.

"The judge has seen all the facts and has seen these are truly unfounded charges."

"On August 24, we are submitting additional applications to have the judge dismiss the remaining charges against the other defendants," said Violi.

INAC says Six Nations to pay bill for landfill cleanup

Six Nations may be forced to foot the bill on a costly landfill cleanup, depending on funding availability and the "Regional priorities" of Indian and Northern Affairs Canada.

"Basically the Department of Indian Affairs, even though they sanctioned the landfill in 1985 are saying that it's Six Nations liability," said Elected Chief Bill Montour at the August 10 meeting of Chief and Council.

"This is going to be a big fight," he said.

The Six Nations landfill is slated to close this year and be replaced by a new waste treatment facility. In order to close the landfill, it must go through a costly cleanup procedure, including the construction of a methane collection system to ensure the gas released from the landfill will not create the risk of explosion.

Montour said that the Department of Indian Affairs has a fiduciary responsibility to pay for the cleanup of the land.

The Department of Indian and Northern Affairs, however, stated in a letter addressed to the Six Nations Chief and Council that they will not decide who bears the responsibility until an audit of the site is done, and that they rely on the auditors "to make a decision on any contingent liability of Landfill sites that are owned and operated by First Nations." The landfill is owned and operated by Six Nations.

"Furthermore, depending on the circumstance the Department may provide financial support subject to availability of funding and Regional priorities, should the need arise," states the letter.

Council has sanctioned the audit, and it is set to be completed at the end of this week.

The issue comes coupled with a similar fight for the Department of Indian Affairs to fund the cleanup and closure of over 300 gas wells that remain uncapped throughout the Six Nations reserve.

"We're sitting on top of sour gas. And that's sulfur dioxide. And that's poison. We're putting people in danger, so I think that the department of Indian Affairs or even Oil and Gas Canada better come to the plate here and help us with this damn problem," said Montour.

At the meeting Chief and Council passed a motion to address the issue in a letter to the Department of Indian Affairs, stating that the Six Nations council is not accepting responsibility for the gas wells or the landfill site, and that there is an obligation for the federal government to do so.

The landfill was only planned to operate for 25 years when it was opened in 1985. Though it has reached that expiration date and is full, it currently receives between 28 to 30 metric tonnes of waste per day while it waits for the new facility to open.

The new facility is similar to an incinerator, however treats the waste in the absence of oxygen and eradicates the carcinogens from the smoldering waste. The gas produced from the procedure can be harnessed for use as fuel, however council is not looking at this option until the plant is already up and running.

Teen to be sentenced

On the first day of the preliminary hearing the young man changed his plea to guilty from not guilty.

Assistant Crown attorney Larry Brock said negotiations took place on the almost 30 charges the youth was facing.

As a result the teen agreed to two counts of impaired operation of a motor vehicle causing death; two counts of impaired operation of a motor vehicle causing bodily harm; and leaving the scene of an accident which caused bodily harm.

The agreed upon facts were read into the court record.

Court was told the teenager was at a house party with other students, there had been a lot of drinking going on and a number of students were drunk. The teenager and a friend were kicked out for unruly behaviour. The teen left, driving an SUV. Court was told he was speeding back towards the house when he struck the pedestrians. He continued on until he was stopped by a uniformed police officer in a marked cruiser about two kilometres from the scene.

Court was told his blood alcohol level readings were at 164 and 154, double the 80 milligram of alcohol per 100 milliliters of blood legal limit.

The youth has been remanded out of custody for an Oct. 6 sentencing hearing. In the meantime court was told a number of reports will be prepared including victim impact statements, a pre-sentence report that will include an outline of the teen's native heritage. The court has also ordered a psychological assessment on the young man.

The Crown has served notice he will be seeking adult sentencing and a lifetime prohibition against driving.

First Nation Water blockade

commercial divers this year, Elliott said.

"It's a frustrating process because the fishery is so lucrative and we can't seem to get a foot in the door," he said.

The fishery may reopen within days, and if that happens, the Stz'uminus will do whatever they can including mounting a water-based blockade to keep fishermen out, the chief said.

"There will be no fishing in our area, so we will do what's in our means to stop the fishery, and that could get a little out of hand," he said. "It just leaves it all open for something to go terribly wrong."

Wylie disputes the claim that the Stz'uminus were not consulted. She said the community had a chance to provide feedback on a plan to harvest geoduck presented in October, but did not.

The fishery is also managed stringently, with harvest areas opened only once every three years. That's when divers are allowed to collect 5.4 geoduck for every 100 in the water, ensuring the future viability of the stocks if the First Nation eventually gets tenure, Wylie said.

The promise of continued protest and potential danger does not sit well with James Austin, president of the Underwater Harvesters Association.

"It's inflammatory and it's actually a threat," he said, adding that it could set a dangerous precedent for other coastal First Nations.

"Fisheries can't be managed this way. There's a fisheries department for managing the fishery and there has to be some confidence that the fisheries department is doing a good job."

Water plant gets repairs

In an amendment to the Six Nations comprehensive funding arrangement, a new allotment of $173,000 from Indian and Northern Affairs Canada was secured for education funding and the reserve's current water treatment facility.

The treatment plant will receive $150,000 for repairs, to keep it running until a new facility opens.

"The existing water treatment plant is a basket case. It has to be band-aided and wired together to keep it working until the new system is up and running," said Elected Chief Bill Montour. The money will go mainly toward pipeline work and the repair of leaks in the filter system.

The new facility is already under construction with secured funding, and is set to open late December, 2011.

Six Nations band council may try to override election code amendment vote

By Christine McLaren
Writer

Six Nations Band Council may try to overturn election code amendments approved in a community vote two months ago.

But the chairman of the independent election code committee says the band council is simply afraid of the accountability built into the new changes.

"They're (band council) afraid of the accountability the new Integrity Commission will demand," said Steve Williams

The Six Nations Elected Council is considering asking the community to re-vote on a new code that governs band council elections, despite the fact that the revised code has already been in effect for nearly three months.

According to both the old and the new election code, when new amendments to the code are passed by a community vote, the approved amendments come into effect five business days after the vote was held.

Neither election code says the band council must approve the code or has the authority to approve or disapprove the amendments once they have been voted on.

Since the Six Nations community voted and passed the new election code on May 22, 2010, the new code officially came into effect on May 28.

However, in a discussion at the August 10 council meeting, band councillors, who are facing a November election, brought up several reasons why they thought the new Six Nations of the Grand River Election Code revisions should not be valid.

Elected Chief Bill Montour cited poor voter turnout. "They were voted on by 47 people and a lot of people say that's not a representative amount of votes to have this become the election code of Six Nations," he said, declining to provide Turtle Island News any information about who had issued the complaints about voter turnout or how many he received.

"I think the people are going to insist that we step in and do something. So, is this going to be a new election code or is more work required?" Elected Chief Montour asked councillors.

He said he will ask the Election Code Committee, an independent body made up of community volunteers overseen by Councillor Christopher Martin, to ask the community whether the council "can use the old [code] or this new one."

However, according to both the new and old codes, there is no official quorum stating the number of people who must attend a vote for it to be considered valid. The codes say only that "the proposed amendment shall be deemed approved if the majority of eligible voters that voted are in agreement."

But Councillor Ava Hill said the code would not come into effect until it is approved by council.

"I don't think it is valid until this council accepts it and we haven't done that yet," she said at the meeting. Her comment was echoed by Elected Chief Montour who told Turtle Island News that the new amendments have not come into effect "because they haven't been presented formally."

Oneida Business Park up for sale? Group offers council $4.5 million

By Christine McLaren
Writer

A large Six Nations asset may be up for sale for nearly one quarter of its original worth.

Bob Watts, former CEO for the Assembly of First Nations, and now senior consultant of RJ Group Companies, proposed to purchase the Grand Rivers Mills building in the Oneida Business Park and the 60 acres of surrounding land from band council for a total of $4.5 million at last Tuesday's (August 10) council meeting.

The band's total investment in the property thus far has neared $20 million, but the economic recession has dropped its value by nearly 75 per cent, says the band's economic development officer.

While councillors argued at the meeting that it was unwise to sell the building at a time when its value is so depleted, Matthew Jamieson, Director of Economic Development for Six Nations pointed out that the asset is currently actually costing Six Nations upwards of half a million dollars per year.

"We are in a situation where we are carrying a debt of about $560,000 just to service the debt a year," said Jamieson at the meeting. "The question becomes, is it the right business decision to sell it at a one-time loss, about $4.5 million for a $20 million investment, or is the better option to look at a long term lease where we can protect the interests of the tenant, yet ensure that we recoup our $20 million over the next 20 years."

The current tenants of the building generate only enough revenue to pay the hydro bill, he said.

RJ Group Companies is a Six Nations owned company. The company is owned by Ross Johnson, the husband of District Three band councillor Joanne Green. The company also specializes in eco-friendly building systems.

Johnson is planning on purchasing another company from the greater

Toronto area and wants to move it to the Six Nations industrial land. The acquisition or lease of the property will be a determining factor of RJ Group's purchase of the company.

"We're not really keen to purchase a company and leave it in Toronto. We want to bring it down here and create jobs here, and not create jobs in Toronto," said Watts. He said the move would provide up to 100 jobs for the community within a year.

The company is coming to the end of its current lease in the Toronto area, and must either re-sign or move elsewhere, adding urgency to the negotiations.

Watts also said he would be open to the consideration of a joint venture with Six Nations.

Watts said it was a packaging company, and that one of the products they would package would be fruit juices.

Watts' proposal for the purchase of the building included two financing options, both of which involved Six Nations continuing to hold either part of, or all of the mortgage on the property for one year, until RJ Group has taken care of the fronted expenses involved with the company moving production from its current location.

Councillor Dave Hill told council they can not just sell band owned land. He told council it has to go to public tender.

"How can it be valid if the old one is still on the shelf?"

Chairman Steve Williams said councillor Martin is mistaken. "No one is changing the code. The committee is writing a preamble to the integrity commission."

But some councillors claimed those changes should have been made before the code was voted on. The election committee will make a presentation to council Sept. 7.

But councillors argued that until they approve the changes approved, the old code should still be in effect. "I'd say more work is required and we're going to have to go ahead with the present code that is in place. We're not going to have enough time to do anything with it now," said Councillor George Montour.

At the same time council passed a motion to stop funding to the Election Code Committee until they meet with council.

Steve Williams said even if a vote on the grammatical changes is held, the newly amended code is still in effect and valid for the coming election this November, not the old code.

Williams accused the council of attempting to skirt the responsibilities that are enshrined in the new amendments.

"I think they're just afraid that the accountability part, the integrity commission, is going to throw them for a loop. That's what they don't want. They don't want to be accountable for what they do," he said.

A new section of the election code states council members "shall answer to the Integrity Commission for failure to carry out their assigned duties or any breach of this Code of Conduct."

Previously, First Nations holding elections under a custom code could request assistance with election disputes from a member of INAC's First Nations Electoral Officers Association. That association was dissolved over two years ago.

she said the Department of Indian Affairs would not intervene unless the issue is compromising the delivery of essential services to members.

Previously, First Nations holding elections under a custom code could request assistance with election disputes from a member of INAC's First Nations Electoral Officers Association. That association was dissolved over two years ago.

Economic development officer Matthew Jamieson recommended that council consider arranging a long term lease with RJ Group, in order to keep the building as asset for the benefit of the community.

However, council agreed to enter negotiations keeping all options, including the sale of the building, on the table. Negotiations have already begun.

Due to a non-disclosure agreement Watts could not provide the name of the company in question. He said only that it specializes in packaging.

Elected Chief Bill Montour said councillor Joanne Johnson will not be involved in the negotiations, citing a conflict of interest.

"Anytime we discuss something with anyone who has family involved or something like that, they're asked to leave the room."

He confirmed that Joanne will be asked to leave the room during any discussions regarding the Bob Watts proposal.

Money for education

Another $23,000 will go toward programs initiated by the Education Committee and five schools in the area to develop a parental and community engagement strategy, fund more teacher aids, and to recruit and retain more teachers who are from the community. "Even though the system is still run by Indian Affairs, we're still trying to get as many Six Nations in there as possible, so we're trying to recruit those people to come back home and teach," said Montour. The additional funding brings the council's annual allotment to a total of $19,041,051.

Councillor questions lack of regulations

Band council to join Brant County promoting Green Hub area

The Six Nations Elected Council will contribute $1000 to a conglomerate media event that will promote Six Nations and surrounding communities as the "Green Energy Hub for the Province of Ontario" in hopes of encouraging green education, and attracting green businesses to the area.

Elected chief Bill Montour and councillor Claudine VanEvery-Albert attended the annual meeting of the Association of Municipalities of Ontario yesterday (Tuesday August 17) in Windsor.

The event runs to Wednesday. The two are part of a local contingent that will present the area's Green Hub designation.

The Green Hub title is self-designated. Headed up by the Brantford-Brant County Chamber of Commerce. While the initiative has received support from the province it has not been given any official special recognition, and likely won't be.

"The government is not contemplating creating this type of special recognition for any Ontario community or consortium of communities," provincial Minister of Aboriginal Affairs Chris Bentley said in a letter to the County of Brant and Six Nations this spring.

Instead, he said, "The Green Energy Act provides an opportunity for the Province of Ontario as a whole to be a hub in the green economy."

Nonetheless, councillors hope that the self-designation will attract green research centers and manufacturers of green technology to the area.

said Elected Chief Bill Montour. said that with a high concentration of universities as well as nearby transportation infrastructure, the area is well situated for the initiative.

An accord has been signed by surrounding communities including Six Nations, Norfolk, Haldimand, and Brantford City as a commitment to work together on the project, a move applauded by Minister Bentley, for the "courage and foresight in entering into this groundbreaking economic relationship."

"How can we be considered a Green Hub when we don't have any regulations to follow or we can't even stop anybody from discharging pollutants?" said Councillor Christopher Martin.

Not all are in favor of the initiative, however.

At the August 10 Council Meeting, councillors raised concerns that without official guidelines, or new environmental restrictions in the area, the designation is an empty commitment.

"Everytime we go to do something with these people, is it going to cost us $1000?" said Councillor David Hill.

"How can we be considered a Green Hub when we don't have any regulations to follow or we can't even stop anybody from discharging pollutants?" said Councillor Christopher Martin.

"How can you consider yourself a Green Hub if we can't make people follow regulations to be green?" he said. Though the Brantford-Brant County chamber of commerce will announce a business plan for the initiative early this fall, the plan so far includes no policy changes on the part of the council.

The chamber of commerce asked band council for a $1,000 donation towards a September media event aimed at promoting the Green Energy Hub.

Councillors also raised objections to the $1000 being spent on the event. "Everytime we go to do something with these people, is it going to cost us $1000?" said Councillor David Hill.

Councillor Claudine VanEvery-Albert said that "it is expected that there will be significant media from across this country and hopefully in other countries as well."

Both the presentation of the business plan and the media event are set to take place this September. A location has yet to be announced.

Youth rally, councillors question supervision

By Jamie Lewis
Writer

Nations elected council signed a BCR for the approval of a Youth Rally that will take place from August 20-22, but questioned who will be supervising the event.

The BCR will allow them to use the Kitchen at the Community Hall and the showers at Chiefswood Park.

Elected Chief Montour told council that Six Nations Parks and Recreation charges $6.00 per person to use the showers.

Councillor Carl Hill questioned how the showers would be monitored since 300 people could be using the showers.

"Are we going to set a cap of say $100.00 a day or is somebody actually going to be counting heads?" he asked.

"I'm not going to be counting people in the showers, I'm telling you that right now," said Elected Chief Montour.

Councillor Melba Thomas said that it is not necessary to cap the amount of people using the showers or monitoring it.

But Councillor Hill said he wants a fee per day to use the showers. Councillor Claudine VanEvery-Albert agrees with Councillor Hill, "I think it would be important for the youth to work with Parks and Recreation to try and come up with some kind of an understanding of how this is going to happen. These are the kind of things where it is important for the youth to work through and this is part of the real ball game," she said.

Elected Chief Montour said the youth have raised $14,650.00 for the rally through donations. Councillor Levi White agreed with councillor VanEvery-Albert that the youth work with Parks and Rec. "A couple of years ago there was some problems with some youth drinking on the grounds (Chiefswood Park), I know the people that were part of the recreation committee at that time were quite disappointed in the supervision or lack of supervision had taken place at that gathering and at the last meeting it seemed like they were going to be policing themselves.

Does voting matter if band council can override a vote

One of the hardest decisions facing Six Nations is its governance future.

What kind of governance will that be? What will it look like? Will people vote or go forward to a traditional system with all of the safeguards that system includes.

Or will it continue the way it is. With an elected system, under a custom election code, that each council claims during electioneering it wants to make more accountable and transparent and answersable to the community.

Then proceeds to override it, ignore it or refuse to accept changes proposed by election committee after committee.

And all to keep the loopholes in the code that allow chiefs and councils to interpled the code to their own advantage.

Well, that came to an end in May when an independent election code committee (with a band councillor sitting on it by the way) held community meetings to gather concerns on the code. Then took the information from those meetings, sent out drafts that included community suggestions, worked on those suggestions and sent out a code to be voted on with suggested changes proposed by community members. And even had copies of the proposed changes available at the vote.

They couldn't have been more transparent, an oddity for the elected system.

But now, with three months to an election, the current Six Nations Band Council seems determined to undermine the community vote and refuse to accept the new election code amendments. Amendments that make council members behavior subject to the ruling of an integrity commission.

Oddly enough the band council is actually debating whether or not it will accept the amendments, and one councillor, Ava Hill actually said until they accept the amended code, it isn't official anyway.

There in lies the problem with governance at Six Nations. Six Nations Band Council actually believes it can override a community vote like it does the Confederacy council.

And on the election code that the code itself says once a vote is held, that's it.

But this is the same band council that has ignored sections of the code or reinterpreted them to their own advantage a number of times over the past three years.

Elected chief Bill Montour thinks the "present" code unchanged is still in place. He couldn't be more wrong.

But let's take a look at their questionable concerns.

-They claim not enough people went out to vote (sounds like a band council election turnout).

-They claim different documents were received by community members than the ones they voted on (bizarre as that claim is)

-They claim, the current election committee was suppose to be a council committee not a community committee.

-Then there's the outrageous allegation by councillor Chris Martin that the committee is rewriting the amendments.

And of course they question why the new changes haven't been brought to them for approval.

The Six Nations Election Code belongs to the Six Nations community not the band council.

It is up to the community to decide what changes will be made. Not the band council.

Six Nations band council does this community a disservice by now, just three months away from an election, trying to throw doubt over the process used to get to a more accountable code and transparent process.

It does a disservice to the community by trying to taint the new changes by making it appear as if there was any wrongdoing by the election code committee. (Editorial continued right)

Reader responds to band's global solution

A Global Solution: Observations and Recommendations (Part II)

In Part I of my review of A Global Solution, I asked questions related to information provided in a seventeen page document of the same name. In Part II, observations and recommendations are offered for consideration and encouragement for more of our citizens to participate, understand and support efforts to develop a strategic plan for issues resolution.

Observations
-We seem reluctant to learn from past experience. We know litigation is adversarial while negotiation should offer greater possibility for mutual resolve. Both are comparable in cost but negotiated settlement should be our preference.

-We seem content to let long standing differences between Elected Council, Confederacy Council and Mohawk Nation, remain an impediment to settling long standing issues - both internal and external to our territory.

-We have allowed unofficial representation to steer agendas towards self interest. Canada and Ontario need to deal with the governing body of the day. The federal governments admits to receiving claims proposals from Confederacy Council (page 8, Teka News, 11/08/10) and Confederacy representatives are conducting meetings with Hydro One - this is highly disrespectful and divisive.

We need to begin discussions to resolve the governance issues with our territory.
-We need to consider succession planning in every aspect of our claims and rights initiatives. Six Nations of the Grand River has tremendous academic, legal and technical experience that should be involved in every aspect of education, consultation and oversight related to claims and rights issues. Information should be shared broadly and exceptional young talent recruited and employed.

-We need to encourage positive thinking and approaches to achieve positive results. Belligerence, unruliness and chaos must be discouraged.
-We need to develop a point form, easily accessible, factual and objective chronology of Six Nations of the Grand River. We need to find agreement on a version of our history most will accept and that will facilitate greater awareness, appreciation, understanding and respect of the varying perspectives within our territories.
Recommendations:
-Separate claims issues from rights issues - they are different. Both are important but require different structure and processes for resolution. Begin a Community discussion on Community decision making. We all have an equal voice in determining our future. This initiative is imperative if we are ever to find resolution to our issues and gain equal benefit for every Six Nations citizen.

The Six Nations Election Code committee carried out its work according to the code itself. To suggest otherwise is simply a weak attempt to stop an integrity commission from taking its rightful place to keep an eye on whatever chief and council is elected next.

And this council, with these latest antics are showing the community related to claims and rights issues. Information should be shared broadly and exceptional young talent recruited and employed.

-We need to encourage positive thinking and approaches to achieve positive results. Belligerence, unruliness and chaos must be discouraged.

-We need to develop a point form, easily accessible, factual and objective chronology of Six Nations of the Grand River. We need to find agreement on a version of our history most will accept and that will facilitate greater awareness, appreciation, understanding and respect of the varying perspectives within our territories.

Recommendations:
-Separate claims issues from rights issues - they are different. Both are important but require different structure and processes for resolution. Begin a Community discussion on Community decision making. We all have an equal voice in determining our future. This initiative is imperative if we are ever to find resolution to our issues and gain equal benefit for every Six Nations citizen.
-Develop a Community Decision Making process to approve a Terms of Reference (selection process, duties, code of conduct, conflict of interests, reporting, etc.) for establishing a Claims Commission, Development Commission and Governance Commission for Six Nations of the Grand River.
-Use the approved Terms of Reference and Community decision making process to select Community representation to separate Claims, Development and Governance Commissions. We need to work at relationship building within our territory. Participation and cooperation is dependant on organization and communication.

-Land has become a major consideration. Review land items that have been placed on various tables for discussion: 30 Parcels of Land discussions with Ontario (pre-litigation, 1995); Crown Lands within the Haldimand Tract, administered by the ORC and identified in the 2006 proposal A Way Forward (pre-Main Table discussions). Report to the Community on the status of these and other land discussions (i.e. former Burch Correctional Facility).
-Organize and prioritizes our claims into categories: monetary compensation only; combination of land and monetary compensation; land as compensation only.

-Schedule a Community meeting to report on the status of development proposal and initiatives within the Haldimand Tract.
-Encourage greater participation in Community consultation by conducting focus groups for senior, youth, off - territory membership and commission hearings for community members reluctant to voice their opinions in public forums.

A constructive, "building block" approach for A Strategic Solution, with community understanding and support, is imperative. We've seen buildings torn down, roads blockaded and the black smoke of discontentment rise in the name of our "rights" - that approach has provided nothing. We need to be more proactive, creative, constructive and purposeful in demonstrating our responsibilities and commitment to finding resolution and benefit.

Ed Note: Dave General has been asked if he intends to run in the next election and these comments reflect his election platform he has not answered.

exactly why an integrity commission is needed. Let's hope the voters remember these antics and the current councillors who tried to keep democracy at bay by overriding a community vote. Only at Six Nations would democracy be determined by those in power to stop the people

Henhawk gets eviction notice

The Haldimand County Sheriff has served an eviction notice on Jeff Henhawk's smoke hut on Highway Six. He has until August, 25 to vacate. The smoke hut is located on community owned land being held in trust awaiting transfer to reserve status. Henhawk built his home on stiltis on land behind the smoke hut. He attempted to convince Six Nations Band Council to allow him to buy the lands at a recent council meeting Henhawk had been ordered by a provincial court to remove his house from the property. "Haldimand County, in an effort to have Hawk remove his house from the property, charged the trustees in 2009, who then petitioned the courts for an order to have Hawk removed. At their last court appearance on April 22, the court stayed the order forcing Hawk to remove his house from the land, and gave him two months to work out an agreement with the Band Council before enforcing the order to remove him.

Tribal passports often accepted internationally

NEW YORK-AP-Kenneth Deer same time that the Iroquois Nations lacrosse squad was languishing in New York City, waiting for the English visa approvals that would never come. A member of the Mohawk Nation, Deer made the trip to Switzerland solely on his Haudenosaunce passport.

In fact, Deer, who lives in Kahnawake, a Mohawk community in Quebec, has used his Haudenosaunce passport to make more than 100 international trips to 19 different countries over the past 24 years. He was even issued day passes from England while in the country for flight layovers, most recently in 2002.

"It doesn't mean that they recognize the passport, but they will let us in," Deer said. "On our side, we agree that we will behave respectfully."

The Haudenosaunce passports have been in existence since 1977, when Iroquois citizens in the U.S. and Canada first used the documents to travel to a U.N. conference in Geneva to speak on the subject of the rights of indigenous people.

But it wasn't until the Iroquois Nationals, a Native American lacrosse team traveling on Haudenosaunce passports, was refused entry to England last month that issues surrounding these passports caught the public's attention.

Generally, the passports have been used by the Haudenosaunce Confederacy, what many people know as the Iroquois Confederacy, for tribal-related travel as opposed to recreational vacations. England is apparently not unusual — particularly in the post-9/11 era — in challenging the Haudenosaunce travel document. It is somewhat unusual — although not unprecedented — however, that England didn't back down after the details of the planned travel were laid out and personal appeals were made, according to confederacy members.

Local man facing fraud charges in gravel scheme

A Six Nations man is facing fraud charges after police said a number of people came forward saying they had paid in advance to have gravel delivered, but the delivery was never made and the victims are out the money they paid.

Six Nations Police said in June a First Line Road resident said they had entered into an agreement with a local man to have gravel delivered. The man received an advance payment of $100. The gravel was never delivered.

In May of 2010, police received four more complaints of a man entering into agreements with community people, and receiving money in advance to deliver gravel. In all four incidents the man failed to deliver any gravel. Charged with four counts of fraud under $5,000 and three counts of Breach of probation was Paul Jay Henhawk.

Police said in one incident Henhawk is alleged to have used the name Paul Hill.

In April 2010 police said, in another incident a man entered into an agreement with a community member on Second line to deliver and spread gravel. The man was paid $100 in advance but never returned with the gravel. Henhawk was arrested and charged with fraud under $5,000.

REZIGOLF

This article is dedicated to junior golfers all over North America and the support they need to excel at the highest levels. I have been very fortunate to introduce the game of golf to tribes across North America. Many of the golf resorts are tribally owned and developed by top golf course designers. The unfortunate side of the business is there are many youth who don't get a chance to learn the game in their own backyards. I am in favor of tribes taking on great business initiatives through the game of golf but please give your own people a chance to learn the game. Because what good is a top class resort if your own people don't feel they have ownership of it. Junior golf programs need to be top priority because one day these talented young golfing entrepreneurs may want to lead or run the business. It would be pretty difficult to entice these youth to run an organization when they aren't included in the long term planning. If golf has taught me anything it's to always give back what you were given. The road for me as a junior golfer was tough. I was the only First Nation golfer competing at a provincial level, but I believed that being First Nation was what kept me from giving up. I knew I could be just as good as the person teeing it up with me in the same tournament. Golfing in tournaments can be overwhelming for junior golfers and we should give them every opportunity to compete and share the same experiences golf has to offer. If you're a parent who would like to see a golf program geared toward learning with your son/daughter let me know and I can bring a golf clinic to your area. I will let you know that I will be hosting a junior golf program on August 24-25 in Ohsweken. There will be emphasis on learning the game together and promoting fun into the program. This fall I will also be attending some schools to introduce the grass-roots of golf and incorporate a program that will have a positive effect on the golf course and in the classroom. If you or your child is interested in attending please see the Dreamcatcherfund advertisement in the Turtle Island News for details and exact times. Keeping you focused on the fairway.

Chiefs on brink of elimination

By Jamie Lewis
Writer

BRAMPTON- Last Friday night the Six Nations Chiefs cameback from a two goal deficit to tie the Brampton Excelsiors 5-5. In the 10 minute OT period the Chiefs scored twice to win 7-5 at packed ILA and tie their best of seven series a 2-2. Last Sunday the Chiefs were in Brampton goal and hammered a mid-stick shot past Anthony Cosmo. The Excelsiors went on a four goal streak to take a 5-1 lead. Blaine Manning regained the Brampton lead when he drove to the Chiefs goal and had a clear run at Vinc and lofted a high shot over the Six Nations goalie. Just over a minute later the Chiefs goal. Both teams began a defensive battle and it was not until 13:15 when the Chiefs found a kink in the armour of Brampton. Delby Powless gained control of the ball behind the Excelsiors goal and moved the ball to Roger Vyse, Vyse drove to the Brampton goal and dropped a pass to Craig Point, who lifted a shot over the shoulder of Anthony Cosmo to make the score 6-2.

Off the faceoff Brampton controlled the ball with Kevin Ross sending a long pass to Mike Burke, who hammered it into the Chiefs goal to give his team a 7-2 lead. Josh Sanderson made the score 8-2, 23 seconds later and Roger Vyse responded 32 second later for the Chiefs making the score 8-3 Brampton's Kevin Ross rounded out the scoring late in the second period.

Six Nations flew out of the gate to start the third period scoring two goals in just over two minutes to close in on the Excelsiors lead. Cody Jamieson scored at the 21 second mark, to make the score 9-4, followed by Craig Point two minutes. Brampton scored at 3:18 after Ryan McClelland's screen shot found its way through a sea of legs and past Vinc into the Chiefs goal, giving his team a 10-5 lead.

Stu Montour moved Six Nations closer after he took a pass from Roger Vyse and charged at the Brampton goal firing a laser that handcuffed Cosmo. Three minutes later the Chief made the game 10-7 after Brenden Thenhaus lit the light. Nate Sanderson put an end to any Chiefs comeback after his soft shot beat Vinc on the short side, giving his team a 11-7 lead. Craig Point scored a shorthanded goal with 1:30 left in the third. Brampton controlled the play for the last few seconds of the game shutting down any chance for Six Nations to get ball control and giving the Excelsiors and 11-8 win and a 3-2 series lead.

Excelsiors increased their lead by three with Josh Sanderson's missile that blew past Vinc. The Excelsiors increased their lead to 4-1 on the powerplay after controlling the ball in the Chiefs end. Kevin Ross caught Mike Burke breaking to the Six Nations goal and dropped a pass over to Burke, who slipped a low shot into the goal. Nate Sanderson rounded out the scoring in the first period, giving his team a 5-1 Excelsiors lead. Josh Sanderson added to the Brampton lead three minutes into the second period when Mike Burke fed him a lead pass and he scampered into the Six Nations end and bounced a shot into the

Stadium decision a massive mistake

TORONTO-HAMILTON Tiger-Cats owner Bob Young says the city is making a "massive mistake" by deciding to build a new stadium downtown and it could force the CFL club to leave town.

Following a marathon meeting last week, city council voted 12-3 in favour of the downtown West Harbour site over one in the East Mountain area. The stadium is supposed to be the new home of the Tiger-Cats after it plays host to the Pan American Games in August 2015. But Young wanted the new facility to be built on the East Mountain site and pulled his support of the project. In a letter to council, he hinted that the team may be forced to move because its lease at aging Ivor Wynne Stadium is up after next season. "We think it's a massive mistake and may end the Ticats in Hamilton," he told the Toronto radio station.

Styres stays in fifth

By Jamie Lewis
Writer

OHSWEKEN-Six Nations Glenn Styres remains in fifth place after finishing 14th last Friday night at the Ohsweken Speedway and is 123 points behind front runner Dave Dykstra.

Jared Zimbardi took the checker flag in the Corr/Pak Merchandising Sprint feature and with it $1,500.00.

Zimbardi and Travis Cunningham started on the front row for the twenty lap feature and Zimbardi jumped into the lead.

On lap six Tom Huppunen and Mitchell Brown came together in corner two causing both cars to flip and tumble part way down the back stretch, bring out a red flag.

On the restart Zimbardi took the lead again and now Dain Naida sliced his way through traffic and moved up to challenge for second.

On lap 11, Naida's night ended with mechanical problems.

On the restart Zimbardi stretched his lead while Cunningham was trying to fight off the advances of eleventh starter Kyle Moffit.

Moffit took over the second spot from Cunningham on lap 12 and set his sights on Zimbardi.

Moffit ran up on Zimbardi, but could fight his way pass until the fourth corner when a caution came out after Styres went off course in turn three, bringing out a caution.

With a green flag Moffit again moved up to challenge Zimbardi and was about to pass when his engine blew, bringing out yet another caution.

Zimbardi was never seriously challenged over the last five laps and cruised to victory over two seconds ahead of Travis Cunningham, Kevin Job, Dave Dykstra, and Keith Dempster. In the Esso Thunder Stocks; Rookies Phil Nyssen and Wyatt VanWart started the feature on the front row, and Nyssen led the first few laps.

Jamie Cox and seventeen year old Larry Czinege, Jr. Made their way to the front from deep in the.

Cox got into the lead by the halfway mark, and Czinege brushed the wall and maintained control and pushed his way Cox and the two battled door-to-door for most of the last five laps. Cox was able to edge ahead at the line to get his second win.

Esso Mini Stock action Mike Evers and Mike Taylor battled flag to flag until Taylor moved beside Evers on the final lap and dropped to the low part of the track and ran neck and neck with Evers. The two raced side-by-side through turn four before Taylor was able to edge ahead and get his first feature win at Ohsweken. While Evers finished.

In Bomber action; Trevor Roszell was the latest first time winner in the Bomber division on Friday night. Roszell moved quickly from his eighth starting spot into the lead and never looked back in the twelve lap feature. John Cote, Karl Sault, Matt Jansen, and Dusty DeBoer rounded out the top five.

Classic cars bring back memories

By Jamie Lewis

OSWEKEN-With new technology the cars made today do not have the character and style of cars from the fifties, sixties and seventies.

For 1963 and later Sports Coupe models, the center console, which had come from the Falcon for the 1962 model was changed to be similar to that of the Galaxie. Front end styling for the 1963 models mimicked the big Galaxie models and the rear end retained the small tailfins and pieplate tail-lamp styling. For Cork Bomberry his pride and joy is a 1949 Chevrolet sedan. Metallic purple in colour the Chev had chrome bumpers and a split windshield. "I did some of the work on it and I go to a lot of the car shows

Last Saturday members of the Riffraff Club and the Originals were at the Iroquois Lodge to celebrate the cars from yesteryear. With Elvis singing in the background Joe Lapage showed off his 1962 Ford Fairlane.

Bomberry won an award for the car that travelled the farthest.

There were also rare cars such as a 1969 convertible Trans Am in which only eight of this sport car were made.

Owned by Frank Martinello it is the only one of its kind in Canada. Lee Baker from Springvale rolled in with a rare 1959 Meteor that he restored himself and the other highlight was a rare 1928 Chev convertible pickup truck owned by George Black.

Six Nations elementary students are heading back to school in August

Six Nations elementary students are heading back to school this month. But Indian and Northern Affairs isn't sure when.

Spokesperson Susan Bertrand could not tell Turtle Island News when Six Nations students return to school, what the incoming school population will be, number of teachers and federal staff budget for the 2010-2011 school year or when, or if, school bus routes have been set.

Parents looking for information on when students return to school can contact: Minister of Indian Affairs at 819-997-0002 or the INAC Regional Director Stephen C. White, at 416-973-7054 INAC Director of Education James Cutfein in Thunder Bay at 807-624-1520.

Textbook buying tips for students

1. Borrow textbooks you need from your friends or the library. This might be difficult around exams, so plan ahead.
2. If you need to buy a book, try to find used textbooks through used bookstores, campus bulletin boards, and online forums like the Textbook Trading Forum at RedFlagDeals.com.
3. If you must buy new, shop around. Check online stores and look for money-saving coupons.
4. Sell your old textbooks for cash.

CPV Nanticoke Energy L.P. (CPV) invites you to a Community Open House for the Natural Gas Supply Pipeline Project.

CPV has been actively developing a new natural gas powered power plant in Nanticoke, Ontario since 2007. To supply the proposed facility, the construction of a new natural gas pipeline will be required. The proposed pipeline would connect to the existing TransCanada Pipeline (TCPL) located on the outskirts of the City of Hamilton, Ontario.

This Open House will provide information regarding the proposed natural gas pipeline as well as the CPV Nanticoke Energy Center. The session will highlight the Study Area being considered and present the alternative routes being evaluated for the CPV Natural Gas Supply Pipeline Project. Representatives of the Project will be in attendance to discuss the Project, answer questions and record any comments. Your feedback is valued and welcomed at the Community Open House or at any other point throughout the process. For those interested about receiving information about the proposed natural gas pipeline in the future, a sign-up sheet will be available.

September asthma epidemic

Why asthma makes it hard to breathe

Source: American Academy of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology

(NC)—Every year, around the third week of September, hospitalization rates skyrocket for people with asthma. Research points to two main culprits:

1. Over the summer, people with asthma tend to break from routine, including managing their asthma.

2. Once back at school, kids pass around viral infections (colds) and bring the bug home to family members.

Ways to stop the asthma spike:

1. Always monitor and control your asthma. This means only occasional minor symptoms or need for a "reliever" puffer, and no problems exercising or sleeping.

2. Reduce the spread of viral infections. Wash your hands regularly, cough into your arm or tissue (remember to toss the tissue after), and don't touch your hands to your face when in public.

Dr. Tom Kovesi, pediatric respirologist at Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario (CHEO) warns, "If you have been prescribed a controller medication (such as an inhaled steroid or

Singular® and you don't take it all year round, you should definitely ask your doctor whether you should start taking it to prepare for the September spike." The Ontario Lung Association is a valuable resource for parents and teachers. ### HEALTH TIPS

Calcium supplements: good or bad?

Recently a study was published in the British Medical Journal which challenges the health value of taking calcium supplements.

The authors looked at studies to evaluate if those over 40 who took calcium supplements without vitamin D had an increased risk of heart attack or stroke. The results showed an increase in heart attack risk of about 30% in those who took calcium supplements. The higher the dose the higher the risk.

It is important to note a few things. First, the people were included in the study if they took calcium without also taking vitamin D. Another important factor is how people took calcium. These were individuals who took calcium supplements. They were excluded from the analysis if they obtained the calcium through their diet.

The Medicine Shoppe
 14 Caithness St., E., Caledonia 905-765-3332

What are the take home points? First, a statement was released by the members of the Scientific Advisory Council of Osteoporosis Canada advising against high doses (greater than 1000 mg) for post menopausal women who do not require this level of supplementation. It is important to consider dietary sources of calcium when determining your intake. Milk, yogurt, and cheese are all excellent sources of calcium. For example 3 glasses (8 ounces) of milk per day will meet most people's calcium targets. The calcium amount is the same in milk whether it is no fat, 1% or 2%. Also remember the other factor important for osteoporosis treatment and prevention is exercise: particularly weight bearing exercise like walking. Lastly, if you take calcium, remember to take vitamin D along with it.
