INTRODUCTION

Born in 1910, in Staab, Austria-Hungary, Wilhelm Wanka studied at the German Commercial Academy in Pilsen prior to taking a position with the German Co-operative Wholesale Society in Prague. Between 1930 and 1933, he served as Secretary to Member of Parliament Wenzel Jaksch, work which included editing several Social Democratic weeklies. Between 1933 and 1937, he served as Secretary of the Social Democratic Party for the constituency of Pilsen-Budweis, comprising the area of southern and northwestern Bohemia. From March 1937 to July 1938, he served as Executive Director of the Central Office of the German Activist Parties of Czechoslovakia, a union of Social Democrats, Christian Socialists and the Agrarian Party. In September, 1938, the Sudeten Social Democratic Party sent him to England to discuss the refugee problems which might occur should the Sudetenland be ceded to Nazi Germany. Soon after the signing of the Munich Agreement, he and Wenzel Jaksch flew to London to request aid for Sudeten Social Democrats who preferred exile to National Socialist rule. While Jaksch continued on to Paris, Wanka remained in London where he served as the London Representative of Sudeten German Refugees.

Meanwhile, Sudeten Social Democratic refugees were fleeing their homeland and seeking refuge in Britain, France as well as in the Scandinavian countries. As these countries found it difficult to absorb the new arrivals during the Depression years, Wanka was requested by the Social Democratic Party to explore the possibility of finding a new home for the refugees. Australia was opposed to receiving a large number of immigrants. New Zealand wanted only trades people such as brick layers, electricians and carpenters. Canada, however, was willing to accept a large number of the Sudeten refugees, and in January, 1939, approved the admission of an unlimited number of Sudetens for settlement on the land, on the condition that immigrants arrive with $1,500.00 per family or $1,000.00 per single person. To deal with the problem, the British Government extended to the Czech Government a free gift of 4 million pound Sterling, which was to be passed on to the refugee immigrants.

Under this scheme, 1,054 men, women and children came to Canada to establish two settlements, one in Saskatchewan and the other in the Peace River region of British Columbia. Wanka acted as co-ordinator between Canada House in London, the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National railways and their respective shipping lines, and the British Committee for Refugees from Czechoslovakia. When his work was done in London, he joined the Sudeten group in the Peace River region with his wife Mary and an older brother and sister to take up farming.

In Canada, he acted as spokesperson for the settlers of the Peace river area while the settlement was under the general administration of the Canada Colonization Association, a subsidiary of the CPR. At first, the settlers farmed the land communally. However, this proved problematic and eventually families worked their own land. The Tate Creek Development Company, of which Wanka served as Manager during its early years, functioned to transfer the land to individual families and to organize the effective use of equipment and machinery which continued to be jointly owned by the settlers. He was also instrumental in the establishment of the Tate Creek Cooperative Society, which operated both to help settlers purchase goods and market their products.

Soon after the end of World War II, Wanka helped organize the Committee for the Relief of Democratic Sudeten Refugees, which worked to send aid to Sudetens expelled from the Sudetenland and co-operated with other groups to persuade the government to open its doors to refugee immigration from Europe. It was at this time that Wanka wrote "Twice Victims of Munich", concentrating on the plight of Germans expelled from the Sudetenland. As the International Refugee Organization, set up to deal with the post-World War II refugee problem, excluded Germans from its mandate, the Committee for the Relief of Democratic Sudeten Refugees as well as other German Canadian organizations establishing the Canadian Christian Council for the Resettlement of Refugees (CCCRR). The CCCRR provided the financial means and the organizational structure through which Sudetens worked to bring Sudeten refugees to Canada. Between 1947 and 1949 Wanka worked in Mühlenberg near Hannover to help process Sudeten refugees who sought to begin a new life in Canada.

In 1949, Wanka returned to his farm in British Columbia, where he remained until 1956, when he was offered the position of Administrator of the Pouce Coupe Community Hospital, a position he held until 1965. In 1961, he helped organized the Dawson Creek Medical Clinic. He served as Director of the clinic from 1965 until his retirement in 1975. He also became involved in local political affairs and served on the Pouce Coupe village council for a number of years. In 1966/67 he chaired the Pouce Coupe Centennial Committee. In 1968, in "recognition of valuable service to the nation", he was awarded the Centennial Medal.

In the meantime, Wanka continued his intense involvement in Sudeten affairs, both in Canada and Europe. Generally, Wanka was among the more nationalist, liberal oriented Sudeten Social Democrats. He was an avid supporter of Wenzel Jaksch and the Treugemeinschaft Sudetendeutscher Sozialdemokraten, which was organized in 1939, and of the Seliger Gemeinde, founded in 1951 as a successor to the Treugemeinschaft. Both organizations envisaged either some form of autonomy for Sudetens in Czechoslovakia or outright independence. A strong believer in the Sudeten right to self-determination, Wanka was suspect of groups such as the Arbeitsgemeinschaft czechoslovakischer Sozialisten or the Zinnengruppe, Sudeten German groups organized during the war which were more radically left-wing than the Treugemeinschaft and also more inclined to close co-operation between Sudetens and Czechs. In 1949, Wanka helped found the Tomslake Canadian German Association because he felt the local C.C.F. club, which many local Sudetens supported, was too left-wing in orientation. In 1960, he and his supporters organized the Westkanadische Arbeitsgemeinschaft der Sudetendeutschen because he felt the Zentralverband Sudetendeutscher Organisationen, founded in 1957, was too pro-Czech and not cognizant enough of Sudeten interests. He also served as editor of the mouthpiece of the Westkanadische Arbeitsgemeinschaft, the "Sudeten-Bote", from the time it was founded in 1965 until his death in 1992.

Arranged in chronological order by subject, the arrangement of the collection reflects the variety of activities in which Wanka was involved, in particular in the Sudeten Canadian refugee community. As many of the individuals with whom Wanka was in contact during the course of his life of service to his community were major figures in the Sudeten exile movement, finding aid no. 509 provides not only a summary of the content of each file, but also gives sufficient information on each document so as to show the network of individuals and organizations with which Wanka was in contact when undertaking the different projects in which he was involved. This information includes the date of each document, the names of individuals or organizations with which corresponded, as well as title headings, be these of articles or of important documents relating to the Sudeten German experience in exile.
