NOTES ON THE FINDING AID

1. Minute books and other assorted papers are in fragile physical condition due to water damage prior to their arrival at the Public Archives. Great care must be taken when these documents are used.
2. The Canadian Labour Press, a defunct Ottawa weekly that was published between 1919 and 1963, was endorsed by the Allied Trades and Labour Association between 1919-1921 and 1927-1930 as its official publication. The paper, however, appears to be published by a separate organization that was not under the control of the Association. For part of its existence it was run by Canadian Labour Press, Ltd. A microfilm copy of this publication can be found in the Canada Department of Labour Library in Ottawa, Ont.
3. The Allied Trades and Labour Association/Ottawa District Labour Council filed their correspondence in a variety of series. It is suggested that researchers not only search the subject files for specific subject matter but also use the general correspondence files. Frequently correspondence on one subject will be found in a number of series of the collection, eg. material on strikes may be found in the correspondence files, subject files and conciliation board files.
