INTRODUCTION

German Canadian Baptists became active in immigration work in 1925 with the organization of the German Baptist Immigration and Colonization Society. Co-operating with both the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian National Railway, the association was active in finding a new home for the thousands of German-speaking Baptists who fled the political upheavals of Eastern Europe to find temporary refuge in refugee camps in Germany. With the onset of the Depression this organization ceased its activities.

World War II had scarcely ended when German Baptist Churches in Canada became active in relief work in Germany, in particular among the several million German-speaking refugees and expellees who were crowding the refugee camps of Germany and Austria. The relief work had just begun when it was decided by German Canadian Baptists that the best way to resolve Germany's overpopulation problem was through emigration. With this end in mind the Canadian Farm Aid and Settlement Association was established, largely at the behest of Wm. Sturhahn and H. Streuber, two Manitobans active in relief work in Germany. The association however, was hampered from the beginning by its lack of financial resources and did little more than lay out a strategy for an immigration program.

In 1950 the Relief Committee of the Baptist World Alliance, in co-operation with the World Council of Churches, undertook to support the immigration work of German Canadian Baptists. To carry out this work Baptist World Alliance Immigration was organized, with headquarters in Winnipeg and an office in Stuttgart which served largely to process immigrants. Disagreement between Baptist World Alliance and Baptist World Alliance Immigration in Winnipeg caused the former organization to withdraw its support from its Canadian immigration program in November 1953. That same month financial responsibility for this program was assumed by the Fellowship Fund Committee of the North American Baptist General Conference in co-operation with the World Council of Churches. However, the immigration work continued to be carried on under the name "Baptist World Alliance Immigration" until January 1954, when this organization disappeared in name as well as in fact. The North American Baptist Immigration and Colonization Society, organized in 1953, then took direct responsibility for the German Canadian Baptist immigration work.

Baptist World Alliance Immigration and the North American Baptist Immigration and Colonization Society were essentially the same organization with a different name. Both had their head office in Winnipeg with William Sturhahn as secretary, responsible for the overall planning of the immigration work. In co-operation with other German-language church groups through the Canadian Christian Council for the Resettlement of Refugees, German Baptist organizations worked to lobby the federal government to liberalize immigration laws as these related to Germans. The Canadian Christian Council for the Resettlement of Refugees, which also included in its membership Canadian Lutheran World Relief, the Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization and spokesmen representing German Canadian interests in the Catholic Immigrant Aid Society, also served to channel federal loans towards the various immigration projects of its member organizations and explored how the various immigration schemes of the federal government, such as the Farm Labour Scheme or the Domestic Scheme, could best be used by Canadian Christian Council for the Resettlement of Refugees member organizations to forward German immigration.

German Baptist immigration agencies derived their importance largely from their liaison work. They contacted farmers, forestry companies, as well as other groups able to provide employment to determine whether they needed workers. From its headquarters in Winnipeg, Baptist World Alliance Immigration and its successor agency were in continuous contact with the religious organizations which lent them financial support, with government immigration and employment offices, with the railways and with many other organizations involved in immigration work. Contact between members of local Baptist churches in Canada and their relatives in Europe kept the immigration societies abreast of the needs of immigrants in the refugee camps. Workers of the North American Baptist Immigration and Colonization Society, as well as of its predecessor organization were active in Stuttgart and Bremen in processing immigrants. They met new arrivals at the port of entry and accompanied them from there as they proceeded by rail to the other end of the continent. Money was loaned to immigrants in need of it for travel costs, with liberal schedules of repayment. In Canada the new arrivals were helped to find living accommodation and work. They were offered advice on problems relating to employment and were encouraged to find a new spiritual home in various Baptist churches across the country.

During the time of its operation between 1926 and 1929 the German Baptist Immigration and Colonization Society helped some two thousand German Baptist immigrants settle in Canada. Between 1950 and 1980, when the North American Baptist Immigration and Colonization Society ceased operation, this organization and its predecessor Baptist World Alliance Immigration had helped some seven thousand German Baptist immigrants settle in Canada. They had by then handled some 2,300 accounts, consisting of about one and a half million dollars in loans extended to immigrants to help them meet travel costs for emigrating to Canada.

K. IMMIGRANT CASE FILES

With the exception of a few files on visitors, the series consists of files on immigrants who used the services of Baptist World Alliance Immigration and of the North American Baptist Immigration and Colonization Society to come to Canada. Files are organized in alphabetical order by family name. They include immigrant application forms, travel documents and correspondence and provide information on such subjects as travel arrangements by immigrants, loan repayments and adjustment to Canadian life by new arrivals. A "+" follows names where additional family members were included.
