Royal Society of Canada

Administrative History

The Royal Society of Canada was created in 1882 on the initiative of the Marquess of Lorne, the Governor-General of Canada, to bring together in one organization leading figures in the sciences and the humanities. It originally consisted of four sections with twenty members in each: Section I, Littérature français, Histoire et Archéologie; Section II, English Literature, History and Archaeology; Section III, Mathematical, Physical and Chemical Sciences; and Section IV, Geological and Biological Sciences. Each section had its own president and other officers and managed its own affairs with considerable autonomy. Membership was restricted to individuals who had made outstanding contributions in their field of knowledge or expertise and its purpose was to recognize and honour those contributions. New members were elected by the existing members of the section on the basis of their achievements. Sir William Dawson, the Principal of McGill University, was the first president of the society, and Sir John G. Bourinot, Clerk of the House of Commons, was the first secretary. Many of the charter members were civil servants, clergy, journalists and university teachers. Parliament granted funds to publish and distribute its annual Proceedings and Transactions.

Outside of honouring its members by election, the annual meetings and the publication of the Proceedings and Transactions were the chief activities of the new society. In the absence of scholarly journals and other outlets for the publication of research in late 19th and early 20th century Canada, the Proceedings and Transactions quickly became the leading instrument for the dissemination of research in the humanities and sciences. There were fewer distinctions then between amateur and professional researchers and many individuals made scholarly contributions across several widely differing fields of inquiry. Section IV divided into two sections in 1918 with the creation of Section V for the biological sciences. The creation of the National Research Council (NRC) during the First World War also signaled a shifting role for the Royal Society, while the NRC provided additional funding to the society it also gradually absorbed much of its role in the promotion and dissemination of scientific research. Indeed, its office moved from the National Museum, which had given it a room in 1913, to the NRC building in 1932. Donations from wealthy patrons enabled the society to concentrate further on its primary role of honouring distinguished achievement with the creation of the Flavelle Medal for science in 1925, the Pierce Medal for imaginative or creative writing in 1926, and the J. B. Tyrrell Medal for history in 1928.

The structure and role of the Royal Society continued to evolve during the postwar years. Concerns among scientists arose over the disparity between Section III, which encompassed several “hard” sciences like physics, chemistry, astronomy and mathematics, and Sections IV and V which each represented the single sciences of geology and biology. These concerns ultimately prompted the amalgamation of the three sections into one section for the sciences, named Section III, with separate divisions for different disciplines. To further reflect its aspirations, the Royal Society renamed the sections as “academies” in 1975 to express its role as the “National Academy” of the sciences and humanities in Canada. Another change which had a significant impact on the society in the postwar years was the creation of the Canada Council in 1957 which quickly became a major source of funding along with the NRC. The proliferation of specialized academic journals in the 1960s and 1970s caused the relative importance of the Proceedings and Transactions to decline as a forum for original research. But a new role emerged in the hosting of interdisciplinary symposia on issues of common concern to its members, often held in conjunction with the annual meetings of other scholarly and academic associations which had clustered around the Royal Society’s annual meeting in an event becoming known as the “learned societies” conference. In effect, a new mission of the society was combating the isolation of the increasingly specialized disciplines in the sciences and humanities.

Administratively, the Royal Society hired Major Pierre Garneau, its first executive secretary, in 1970 to provide a permanent secretariat to coordinate its activities. Further growth occurred in 1989 when the Department of Industry, Science and Technology awarded the society an annual grant of $1 million for five years allowing its office to grow from six employees to twenty-one in a short time. The Royal Society moved out of the Public Archives and National Library building (where it had been housed since 1967 after moving there from the NRC) to its own office space on Sparks Street in Ottawa. Industry Canada did not renew the grant in 1994, however, and the size of the office staff reverted to its pre-grant levels. Today the Royal Society of Canada comprises some 1,800 leading scholars in the sciences and humanities who have received this highest of academic accolades.

Scope and Content of the records

The fonds consists of textual records, photographs and other media created by the Royal Society of Canada (RSC) documenting its role as the original and leading learned society for the sciences, social sciences, and humanities in Canada. It comprises the files of its executive, national office, and constituent sections and academies that relate to its administration, programmes and projects, annual meetings, sections and academies, membership and awards, conferences and symposia, centennial and history.

Series descriptions:

Administration series

[textual record, graphic material]

Vols. 1-37

7.2 metres of textual records

143 photographs.

1882-1987, predominant 1937-1987.

The Administration Series consists of records that document the internal workings, policies, governance, and programmes of the Royal Society of Canada, including minutes of Council Meetings, 1908-1984; Reports of Council, 1910-1987; minutes of the Executive Committee, 1951-1985; records of Annual Meetings including programs, attendance lists, and arrangements files, 1882-1987; minutes of subordinate committees like the Planning Committee, Finance Committee, Committee on Symposium, Committee on Education, Committee on International Relations, and Research Scholarship Committee; records relating to Bylaws, 1918-1986; records of the publications of the Royal Society, including editorial correspondence and other documents relating to the calendar, newsletters, biographical sketches, Proceedings, and Transactions, 1937-1985; press releases; briefs to Royal Commissions; financial records; and files pertaining to the Senate Committee on Science Policy. In addition, there are presidential files, 1959-1984, for the following presidents: Merton Y. Williams, Gerhard Herzberg, James M. Harrison, Leon Lortie, Claude E. Dolman, Roy Daniells, Henry E. Duckworth, J. Tuzo Wilson, Guy Sylvestre, Claude Fortier, Samuel D. Clark, J. Larkin Kerwin, Robert E. Folinsbee, Robert E. Bell, and Marc-Adelard Tremblay.

Subject Files series

[textual record, graphic material]

Vols. 38-65

5.55 metres of textual records.

137 photographs.

1898-1987, predominant 1910-1987.

The subject files series consists of files related to different subjects created by the Royal Society of Canada, and generally kept in alphabetical order over a specific time period. The subjects of the files are diverse and can include organizations, learned societies, granting bodies, and government agencies; internal or external committees; special events, conferences, and symposia; projects, activities, and causes. Some of the files overlap with the Administration series. There are large blocks of files for the following subjects: Annual General Meetings, the Atlas of Northern Canada, Awards, Canada's Arctic islands, centennial planning, Canada Council, Carnegie Foundation, Committee on Development, Executive Committee, fund raising, information and assistance, the International Foundation for Science, learned societies, Medals, Pugwash group, National Research Council, regional meetings, the reorganization of the Royal Society of Canada, scholarly freedom, Sir Arthur Sims, structure and size of the Society, science policy, and the Symposium on the Written Word.

Sections and Academies series

[textual record, graphic material]

Vols. 66-90, 139

5.05 metres of textual records.

2 photographs: b&w.

1882-1983, predominant 1919-1983.

The Sections and Academies series consists of records relating to the Royal Society's constituent sections which, after 1975, were renamed academies to reflect their evolving role. Section I became Academy I, the Académie des lettres et des sciences humaines; Section II became Academy II, the Academy of Humanities and Social Sciences; and Section III became Academy III, the Academy of Science. The latter section originally had comprised three sections (III, IV, and V) which had merged in 1961 to form a single section for science. For Section and Academy I (volumes 66-71), the series holds files of the secretary and president (including those of Louis-Philippe Audet); general correspondence; minutes of meetings; files relating to candidates and nominations for election as fellows of the Royal Society; and records of awards, receptions, and presentations. There are comparatively few files of Section and Academy II which mostly date from the 1960s and 1970s (volumes 71-72). These include minutes, secretary's files, general correspondence, and nominations for election as fellow. Correspondence between President E. T. Salmon and George Woodcock is of interest for its discussion of the future and direction of the Royal Society (file 72-6).

Section and Academy III (volumes 72-79, 87-90, and 139) is documented by a large body of records which consist of minutes of meetings, including the Council and Selection Committee; general correspondence; nominations of fellows and fellows elected; medals, prizes and awards; programmes of conferences; and correspondence relating to the election of new fellows. In addition, there are blocks of files for specific divisions within Section and Academy III like Animal Biology, Chemistry, Physics, Mathematics, Geological Sciences, and Medical Science. Correspondence and reports of the Committee on the Adequacy of Science Representation (vol. 75), 1966-1968, illustrate the growing concern among scientists with the relative numbers of fellows and the position and role of science within the Royal Society. The series holds very few records of Section IV. Records for Section V are more substantial (volumes 79-87) and include correspondence of the secretary; general correspondence; minutes of annual meetings; minutes of the Selection Committee and Programme Committee; biographies of fellows; nominations for election as fellows; and files for the Flavelle Medal and other prizes.

Membership and Awards series

[textual record, graphic material]

Vols. 91-121, 140-143
7.0 metres of textual records
628 photographs: b&w
4 photographs: col
165 negatives
4 contact sheets

1916-1993, predominant 1935-1993.

The series consists of general membership files, nominal files of deceased fellows, and files relating to the awards, medals, and scholarships offered or administered by the Royal Society of Canada. The general membership files hold correspondence, minutes and other records of the selection and nominating committees; nomination forms, letters of recommendation and other supporting documentation from sponsors of new candidates for election to the Royal Society; results of the annual votes to elect new fellows by section or academy; and publicity and press releases announcing the election of new fellows.

The Royal Society created nominal files of deceased fellows from its individual membership files when it was informed of the death of one of its members. These files typically hold obituaries or biographical sketches written for publication in the Proceedings of the Royal Society, correspondence with the authors of obituaries, letters of condolence to surviving family members, and biographical data forms filled out by the fellow at the time of their election to the Society. They can also include curriculum vitae, clippings about the deceased fellow, items submitted by them during their lifetime for inclusion in the newsletter, and correspondence with them relating to their membership. Portrait photographs of most of the deceased fellows were also acquired for publication with the obituary. These photographs were removed from the files for separate conservation storage. Together, these records provide a collective picture of Canada's leading scholars in the sciences and the humanities and their contribution to Canadian advancement.

The Royal Society has recognized outstanding achievement in the sciences and humanities through the presentation of awards and medals, and encouraged new research through the award of scholarships and fellowships. Correspondence, reports, minutes and memoranda held in the files of the awards committee and the executive secretary illustrate the development of policy and decision-making at a general level within the Society. The files for individual medals and prizes hold minutes of the medal committees and correspondence of the committee chairs; nominations submitted for the awards; supporting documentation for the nominees including curriculum vitae, analyses of their work, and selected publications; the results of voting for the award winners and adjudication of awards; and press releases, correspondence with recipients and other material. Collectively, these records document outstanding achievement in research in science and humanities, and reveal the efforts of this community to reward its most eminent scholars and win recognition for them beyond its borders.

Some of the medals and prizes awarded or administered by the Royal Society include the J. B. Tyrrell Historical Medal for outstanding work in the history of Canada; the Lorne Pierce Medal for achievement in critical or imaginative literature; the Innis-Gérin Medal for distinguished and sustained contributions to the social sciences; the Pierre Chauveau Medal for distinguished contributions to knowledge in the humanities other than Canadian literature and Canadian history; The Flavelle Medal for an outstanding contribution to biological science; the Henry Marshall Tory Medal for outstanding research in a branch of astronomy, chemistry, mathematics, physics, or an allied science; Rutherford Memorial Medals for outstanding research in chemistry and physics; the Thomas W. Eadie Medal for major contributions to engineering or applied science; The McLaughlin Medal for distinguished achievement in medical science in Canada; the Willet G. Miller Medal for outstanding research in the earth sciences; the Jason A. Hannah Medal for an important Canadian publication in the history of medicine; the Chemical Institute of Canada Medal; the BP Canada Energy Research Prize; the Sir Arthur Sims Scholarships for Canadian graduate students studying at a university in the United Kingdom; and various other prizes and awards offered at different times. Some of the fellowships and scholarships awarded have included the German scholarships, Netherlands student awards, NATO post-doctorate fellowships, overseas student bursaries, and Government of Canada overseas awards.

Conferences and Symposia series

[textual record]

Volumes 122-137

3.05 metres of textual records.

1948-1987, predominant 1970-1985.

The series consists of records relating to conferences and symposia organized or sponsored by the Royal Society of Canada, which date primarily from 1970 to 1985 when K. J. Laidler chaired its Committee on Symposia. Conferences and symposia supported by the Society tended to have an interdisciplinary focus, bringing together leading scholars from different disciplines to address a common problem or contemporary issue. Laidler's files contain the minutes of the meetings of the Committee on Symposia and his correspondence as its chair, revealing the higher direction of the committee, which conferences and research projects it supported or refused to support, and how it fit within the Royal Society as a whole. Project files for specific conferences, symposia, commissions, panels, and workshops generally document the inspiration, organization, management, and financial arrangements of the symposium, and the publication of its proceedings. The more common material found within these files includes conference proposals, correspondence with participants and other interested parties, curriculum vitae and biographies of speakers, evaluations by peer reviewers, conference programmes, attendance lists, press releases, newspaper clippings, correspondence with government agencies and funding partners, copies of papers presented to the various symposia, reports and studies, and manuscripts of the published proceedings and other documents relating to publication.

The series holds extensive files for conferences and symposia with the following titles or on the following subjects: Acid Rain (1982), Amerindians (1975), New Perspectives in Canadian Archaeology (1976), a Century of Canada's Arctic Islands (1980), Atlas of Northern Canada (1977), Nuclear Issues in the Canadian Energy Context (1979), Communications in the Home (1972), Committee on Nuclear Issues in the Community, Copernicus Celebration (1973), Energy Resources (1973), Gauss bicentennial (1977), Glacial Till (1975), Great Lakes Water Quality (1984), Habitat - Human Settlement (1975), Preserving the Canadian Heritage (1975), Hermes Satellite (1977), Commission on Lead in the Environment (1984-1986), Mercury Pollution (1971), Nuclear Winter (1984), Parasites - their world and ours (1977), Physics and Chemistry of Ice (1973), Long Range Transport of Airborne Pollution (1982), Long Range Transport of Airborne Pollutants Program (1984), University of the Future (1976), Waste Recycling and the Environment (1974), and Canada and World Food (1977) among others. [photos transferred are likely duplicates of those at NL; they have NL file numbers].

Centennial of the Royal Society of Canada series

[textual record].

Volume 138
15 cm of textual records.

[1954-1982].

The series consists of records created during or for the celebration of the centennial of the Royal Society of Canada in 1982. It holds research material relating to the founding and history of the Royal Society, news releases and press clippings, and material gathered or created for an exhibition at the National Library of Canada to commemorate the centennial.

Photographs series

[graphic material].

555 photographs: 204 b&w negatives, 349 b&w prints, 2 col. prints.

1880-[ca. 1986].

The series consists of portraits of members of the executive, members of the Royal Society of Canada, residents, and views of activities at annual meetings. The photographs of annual meetings generally include views of presentations to individual members or to those being honoured by the Society; speeches; and luncheons or dinners. There are photographs from the meetings at Hamilton, Ont., 1962 (photographs by Tom Bochsler); Memorial University, St. John's, Nfld., 1972; University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alta., 1975; Laval University, Quebec City, Quebec, 1976 (photographs by Gerard Roger); University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Sask., 1979; Ottawa, 1982 (photographs by Fernand R. Leclair); and the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Man., 1986.

The series holds portraits of the following men and women: John Willis Ambrose; D.A. Graham; J.L. Hart; Cyril James; B.S. Keirstead; F.G. Rae; J.O. St. Clair-Sobel; Louis St. Laurent; Carleton Stanley; R.M. Wiles; M.Y. Williams; George E. Wilson; Alfred Walker; J.G. Bourinot; Mgr. Thomas E. Hamel; Sir Sandford Fleming; Mgr. J.C.R.
