Finding Aid 693

SPRINGER FAMILY PAPERS

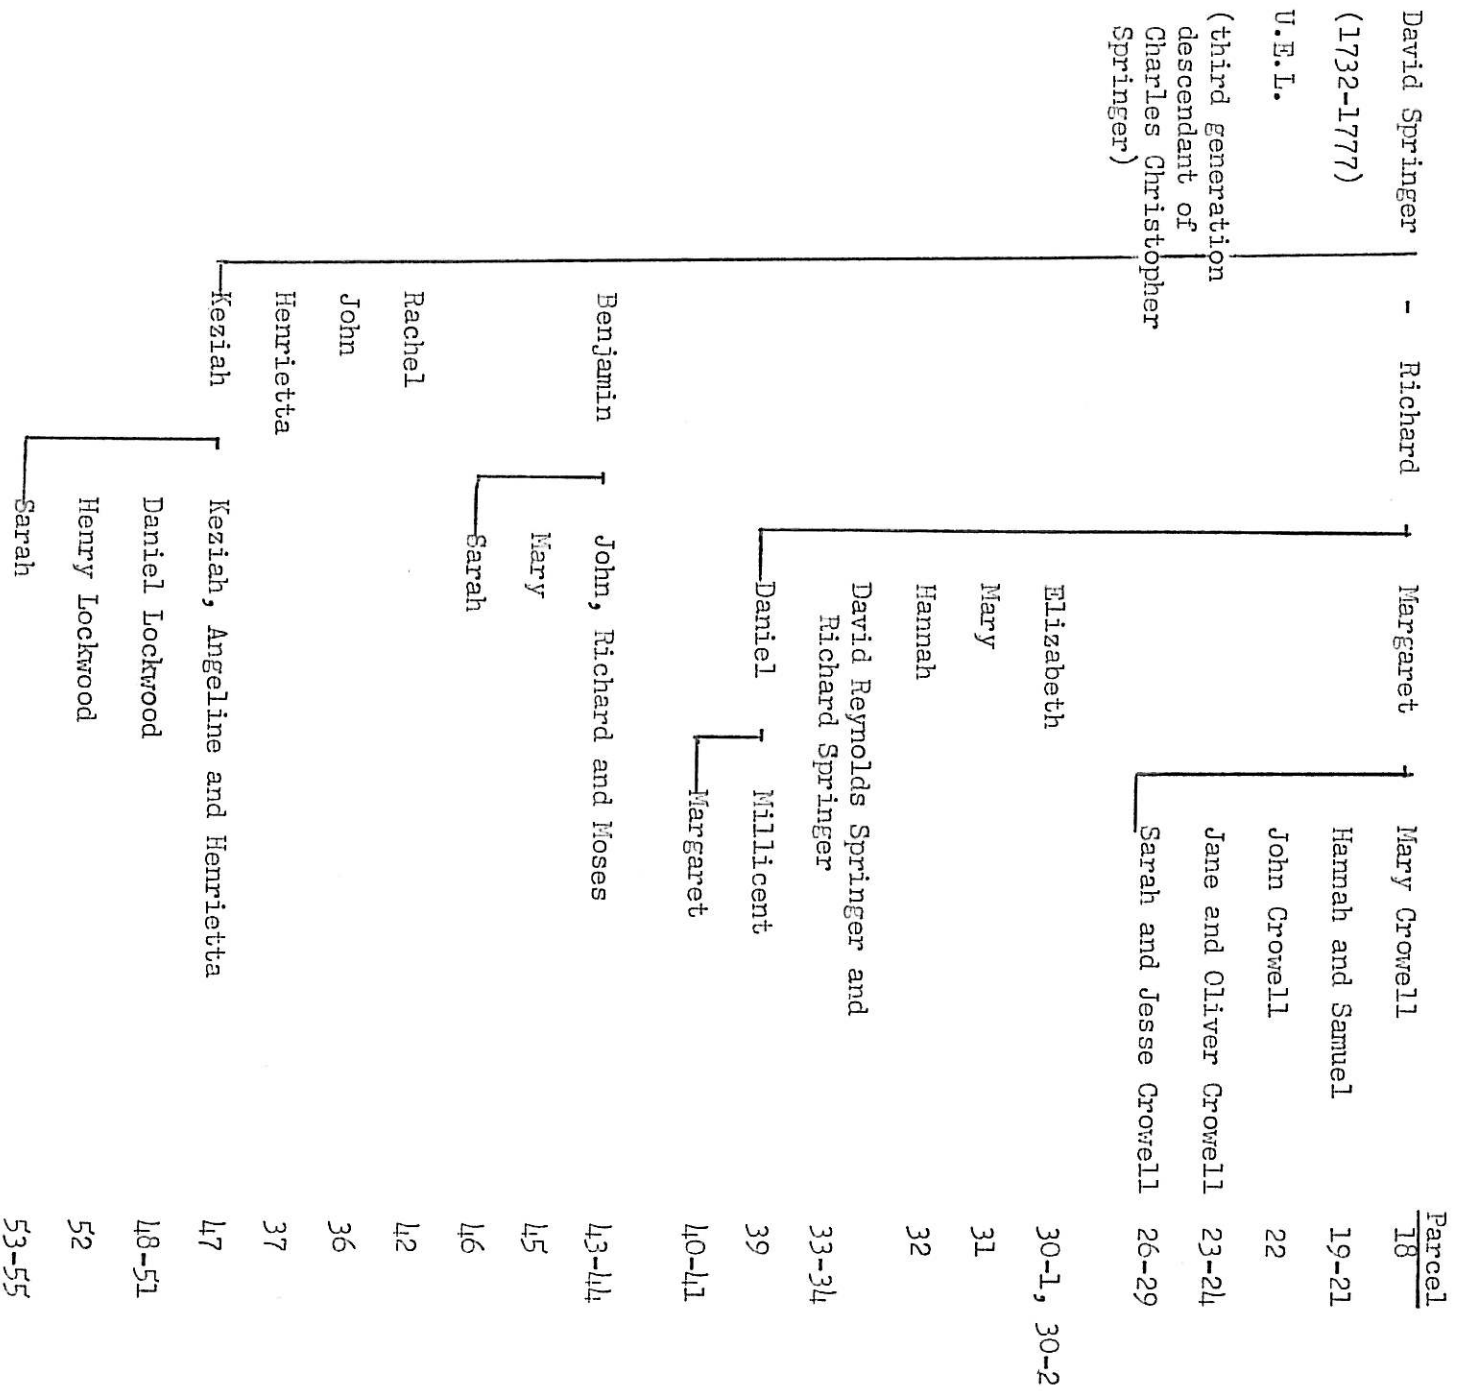

In 1932 there existed in Ohio, Michigan and several other American states corporations known as the Springer Family, Inc., United Springers and Springer Heirs. The purpose of these associations was to raise funds to establish proof of heirship to the so-called "Springer Estate" in Wilmington, Delaware, and Stockholm, Sweden, as well as to protect all rights and interests of heirs. Value of the estate was estimated by the claimants at $80,000,000.

The ancient estate was alleged to consist, in the United States, of some 410 acres of land leased by Charles Christopher Springer (1658-1738) about 1700. This land was situated in the midst of the area which, in 1735, became the site of the city of Wilmington. The Swedish part of the inheritance consisted of a house-lot in Stockholm and several farms near that city, the whole, it was said, having been bequeathed to Charles Christopher Springer by his parents. In the case of the Delaware land, the promoters of claims to the tract were apparently under the misapprehension that C. C. Springer, who had signed the lease in his capacity as trustee of the property let, was acting in his own right.

Claims to what was thought to be the ancient estate of the Springers had been advanced since the 1870's, although there is no evidence of a claim having been taken to court. A revival of interest in the Springer estate about 1930 led to the incorporation of groups of individuals bent upon recovering the property and to the exploitation of these groups by unscrupulous promoters. Two such persons, McClain Gatterlin and Francis E. Snypp, who had associated themselves with the Springer Family Inc., were accused of fraud. In May 1933, Gatterlin was convicted of violations of the Ohio state securities regulations and, in October of the same year, the Springer Family Inc. was dissolved.

The powers of attorney, proofs of descent and similar papers which had been assembled by the defunct corporation to prosecute the claims of heirs came into the possession of Mrs. Ella Cereda Little Wise, a notary public in Detroit and herself a Springer heir. In 1968, through the courtesy of Mr. Gregory Harris of Ottawa these and other records bearing on the Springer claims which Mrs. Wise had accumulated were given to the Public Archives.

Arrangement of the records of the Canadian branch is according to principles of descent.
