LABOUR COUNCIL OF METROPOLITAN TORONTO (est. 1871)

Originals, 1887-1971. 8.3 m. Microfilm, 1871-1968.
12 reels. Finding Aid No. 383.

The Toronto Trades Assembly, the first central labour organization in Canada, was formed early in 1871. It ceased to function during the depression of the latter part of the decade and was re-organized in 1881 as the Toronto Trades and Labor Council. In 1902, during a constitutional revision the name was changed to Toronto District Labor Council and in 1950 it was altered again, to Toronto District Trades and Labor Council. A second labour council was established in Toronto in 1913 for national unions affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour. In 1927 following the formation of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour by the merger of the Federation and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, this council was re-named the National Labour Council of Toronto. When the Canadian Congress of Labour was formed in 1940, the locals of the unions affiliated to the Congress of Industrial Organizations joined this council and the name was changed to Toronto Labour Council. In 1950 the Lakeshore Labour Council (C10) merged with this council and it was re-named the Toronto and Lakeshore Labour Council. With the 1956 merger of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labour, the two Toronto councils amalgamated under the name Toronto and District Labour Council. In 1968 the name was changed to Labour Council of Metropolitan Toronto in keeping with the reorganization of municipal government.

Finding Aid No. 383 is a list of the contents on each reel of microfilm and a list of the file titles in the chronological series.
