This material was microfilmed by the Department of Transport and the finding aid was devised by the Department, based on their own microfilm numbering system. Page i of the finding aid explains how the numeric coding system was developed. In order to retrieve individual items, the researcher must locate the number assigned to a group of documents by the Department and then use the conversion list at the front of this finding aid to identify the microfilm reel number assigned by the Public Archives.

Basically, the Department of Transport filing system for this material is based on a six digit code. The first two digits for every microfilm number is "01". The digits stand for "International Civil Aviation Organization". The next two digits stand for series titles. A list of the series titles with their corresponding numbers appear on pp. ii and iii. The digits "07", for example, in the middle position of the six digit number refer to the series "Air Transport Working Papers". The final two digits in the numeric code refer to a specific reel in a series. Thus, the number 010702 means: Records of the International Civil Aviation Organization, Air Transport Working Papers, microfilm reel number two. By locating this number on the conversion list at the front of the finding aid, the researcher will find the corresponding P.A.C. microfilm number--T6819. This is the call number the researcher will use in ordering the microfilm.

Because the ICAO material was filmed by the Department, the researcher will notice that both the finding aid and the film itself make reference to three types of counting systems which facilitate the location of material on a particular reel. The microfilm readers in operation at the Archives at present do not have odometers nor are they capable of providing a "blip" counting mechanism. The "flash card" counting system outlined in the finding aid, however, may be of use to researchers. The film is marked by large numbers which delineate sub-series within particular series. By using the finding aid, the researcher can get a rough idea of the location of a specific sub-series on a reel.

For an example of how to use the finding aid, see the following pages. Should the researcher experience problems with the location of material, based on its description in the finding aid, please consult the archivist.

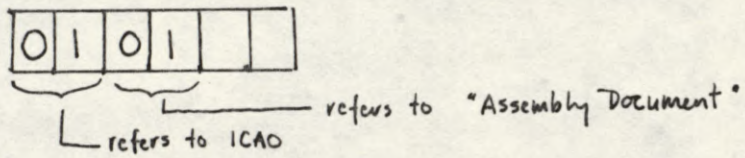

TO FIND A DOCUMENT USING THIS FINDING AID

- 1. Locate the Series Title, in which you are interested.

For example, you wish to see the International Civil Aviation Organization papers, relating to the 3rd Assembly, at Montreal, 7 to 20 June, 1949. Check the INDEX, pp. ii and iii, of this finding aid.

ASSEMBLY DOCUMENTS ARE GROUPED IN SERIES 01

You now have the first four digits in a numeric code given to these documents by Transport Canada.

2. Now you look for the specific reel or reels on which the Montreal Assembly documents are located.

Because these documents are grouped in series 01, turn to the section of the finding aid headed as such:

01

Check down the list of documents until you find those relating to the 3rd Assembly at Montreal. Under the column headed Roll Number, find the reel number(s) which corresponds to these documents. In this case the number is 2.

YOU now have the complete number of the reel on which this material is located?

010102

Using the conversion list at the front of this finding aid, the Public Archives microfilm reel number assigned to this reel number is: T-6707. This is the number you would use in locating the microfilm on self service.

NOTICE

That all the different types of information have been given a numeric code. Sheet Number 1 will indicate to you all of the code indexing of every type of information. This list will continue to grow and will be revised as more information is put into the system. Sheet Number 2 is a sample of the final matrix code.

1. Your matrix has 6 spaces of which the first space is blank.
2. Number one (1) in the Code is the only number allotted to ICAO Branch and will remain constant throughout the ICAO indexing in number two space on your matrix.
3. Space numbers 3 & 4 on the matrix in the numeric code are combined to give you the type of working paper or information.
4. Space numbers 5 & 6 on your matrix will be combined to give you the roll numbers within that type of working paper or information.
5. After you have filled the matrix with the required colour code, you then transfer the adhesive matrix to the cassette.
