Canadian Council for International Co-operation / Conseil canadien pour la coopération internationale (1968-). Umbrella aid organization.

Canadian Council for International Co-operation fonds
Original, 1961-1986, 19.800 m. Finding Aid No. 1541.

1994-03-31
7-09827

Founded in 1968, the Canadian Council for International Co-operation is a national co-ordinating organization of approximately one hundred NGOs (Non-Government Organizations) working in the area of international development overseas, largely in Third World countries. While founded originally to co-ordinate the domestic and overseas activities of church missions and philanthropic organizations, it has added to its membership various service clubs, co-operatives, unions, professional associations, educational institutions and the like -- in a word, any corporate body interested in international development abroad and development education in Canada. The CCIC, as presently constituted, has four basic functions. First, it monitors Canadian government policies, activities and attitudes concerning voluntary agencies, foreign aid and international development, serving as a two-way conduit of information flow between government and NGOs. Second, through its Project Clearing House, it directs requests for funding of Third World Projects from constituent and foreign NGOs to appropriate voluntary agencies, whether domestic, foreign or international. Third, it encourages and aids domestic NGOs in this sphere of activity. Finally, it plays a major role in communications on this subject, assuring effective communication among government, NGOs, the public and the media. To this end, it publishes a monthly newsletter. It issues reports on meetings and workshops; it puts out studies on NGO activities and publicizes the activities of the CCIC Secretariat in Ottawa. It is affiliated internationally with the International Council for Voluntary Agencies based in Geneva, Switzerland.

Received in 1983, 1987 and 1988 from Jutto Teigler and Pat McKenna of the Canadian Council for International Co-operation.

Access is Restricted.

NOTE ON ARRANGEMENT

A substantial portion of the C.C.I.C. files, namely, Series B, "Correspondence", and Series E, "Project Clearing House," have been left in their original order. Consisting of approximately 32 volumes, they constitute almost one-half of the collection.

Other portions of the collection were subjected to minor rationalization. For example, sub-series "C.I.D.A." of Series D, "Relating with Governmental Bodies and Other Aid Institutions", and all the sub-series of Series F, "Special Projects", were re-ordered by the archivist. In all these cases, the archivist grouped the material into sub-series, which were evident in any case because of the contiguity in the original order of like material. The archivist intervened in the order of documents/files mostly in the creation of file blocs within the sub-series. The principles on which these sub-series and file blocs are based are functional, geographical and thematic (subject). The materials so arranged amount to about 12 volumes.

Finally, the remaining series (Series A, "Administrative Files"; Series C, "Policies and Programmes"; Series G, "Press and Subject Reference Files" and all the sub-series save "C.I.D.A." in Series D, "Relations with Governmental Bodies and Other Aid Institutions") were created by the archivist out of the remaining mass of documents which had arrived in a state of disorder. The archivist took extreme care to allow the major groupings to manifest themselves during sorting and arrangement. It became evident that the material was best subjected to a thematic separation into series; internally, within each series (including its sub-series and file blocs), the files were arranged in chronological order.

In sum, where the original was evident, the archivist preserved it; where necessary, he fine-tuned for the sake of rationalization, while preserving the gross outlines of original order; and, where no principle of organization was apparent in the original, he exercised his own judgement in establishing an order.

RESEARCH POTENTIAL

Social scientists—economists, students of international relations and Canadian foreign policy, sociologists and historians—will all find this collection useful.

This collection will be of prime interest to those researchers concerned with various aspects of Canadian N.G.O. activity both at home and abroad, with Canadian foreign policy in the area of development aid to the Third World and with Third World development problems and specific aid and development programmes and projects in various countries.

This is a rich source of information on the C.C.I.C. itself, an umbrella body co-ordinating most N.G.O. foreign aid activity in Canada. Here the researcher will find material on organization and re-organization of the C.C.I.C., on its internal operations, on its workings at home—on its dealings with government (especially C.I.D.A.), with the media, with Canadian and foreign N.G.O.'s and with the Canadian people through various informational programmes. The researcher will also discover how vital a role it plays amongst the N.G.O.'s in Canada, providing them with general information in development aid, galvanizing them into concerted action when necessary in pursuit of various goals, educating the Canadian populace in Third World aid and, as a clearing-house, rationalizing N.G.O. project activity abroad.

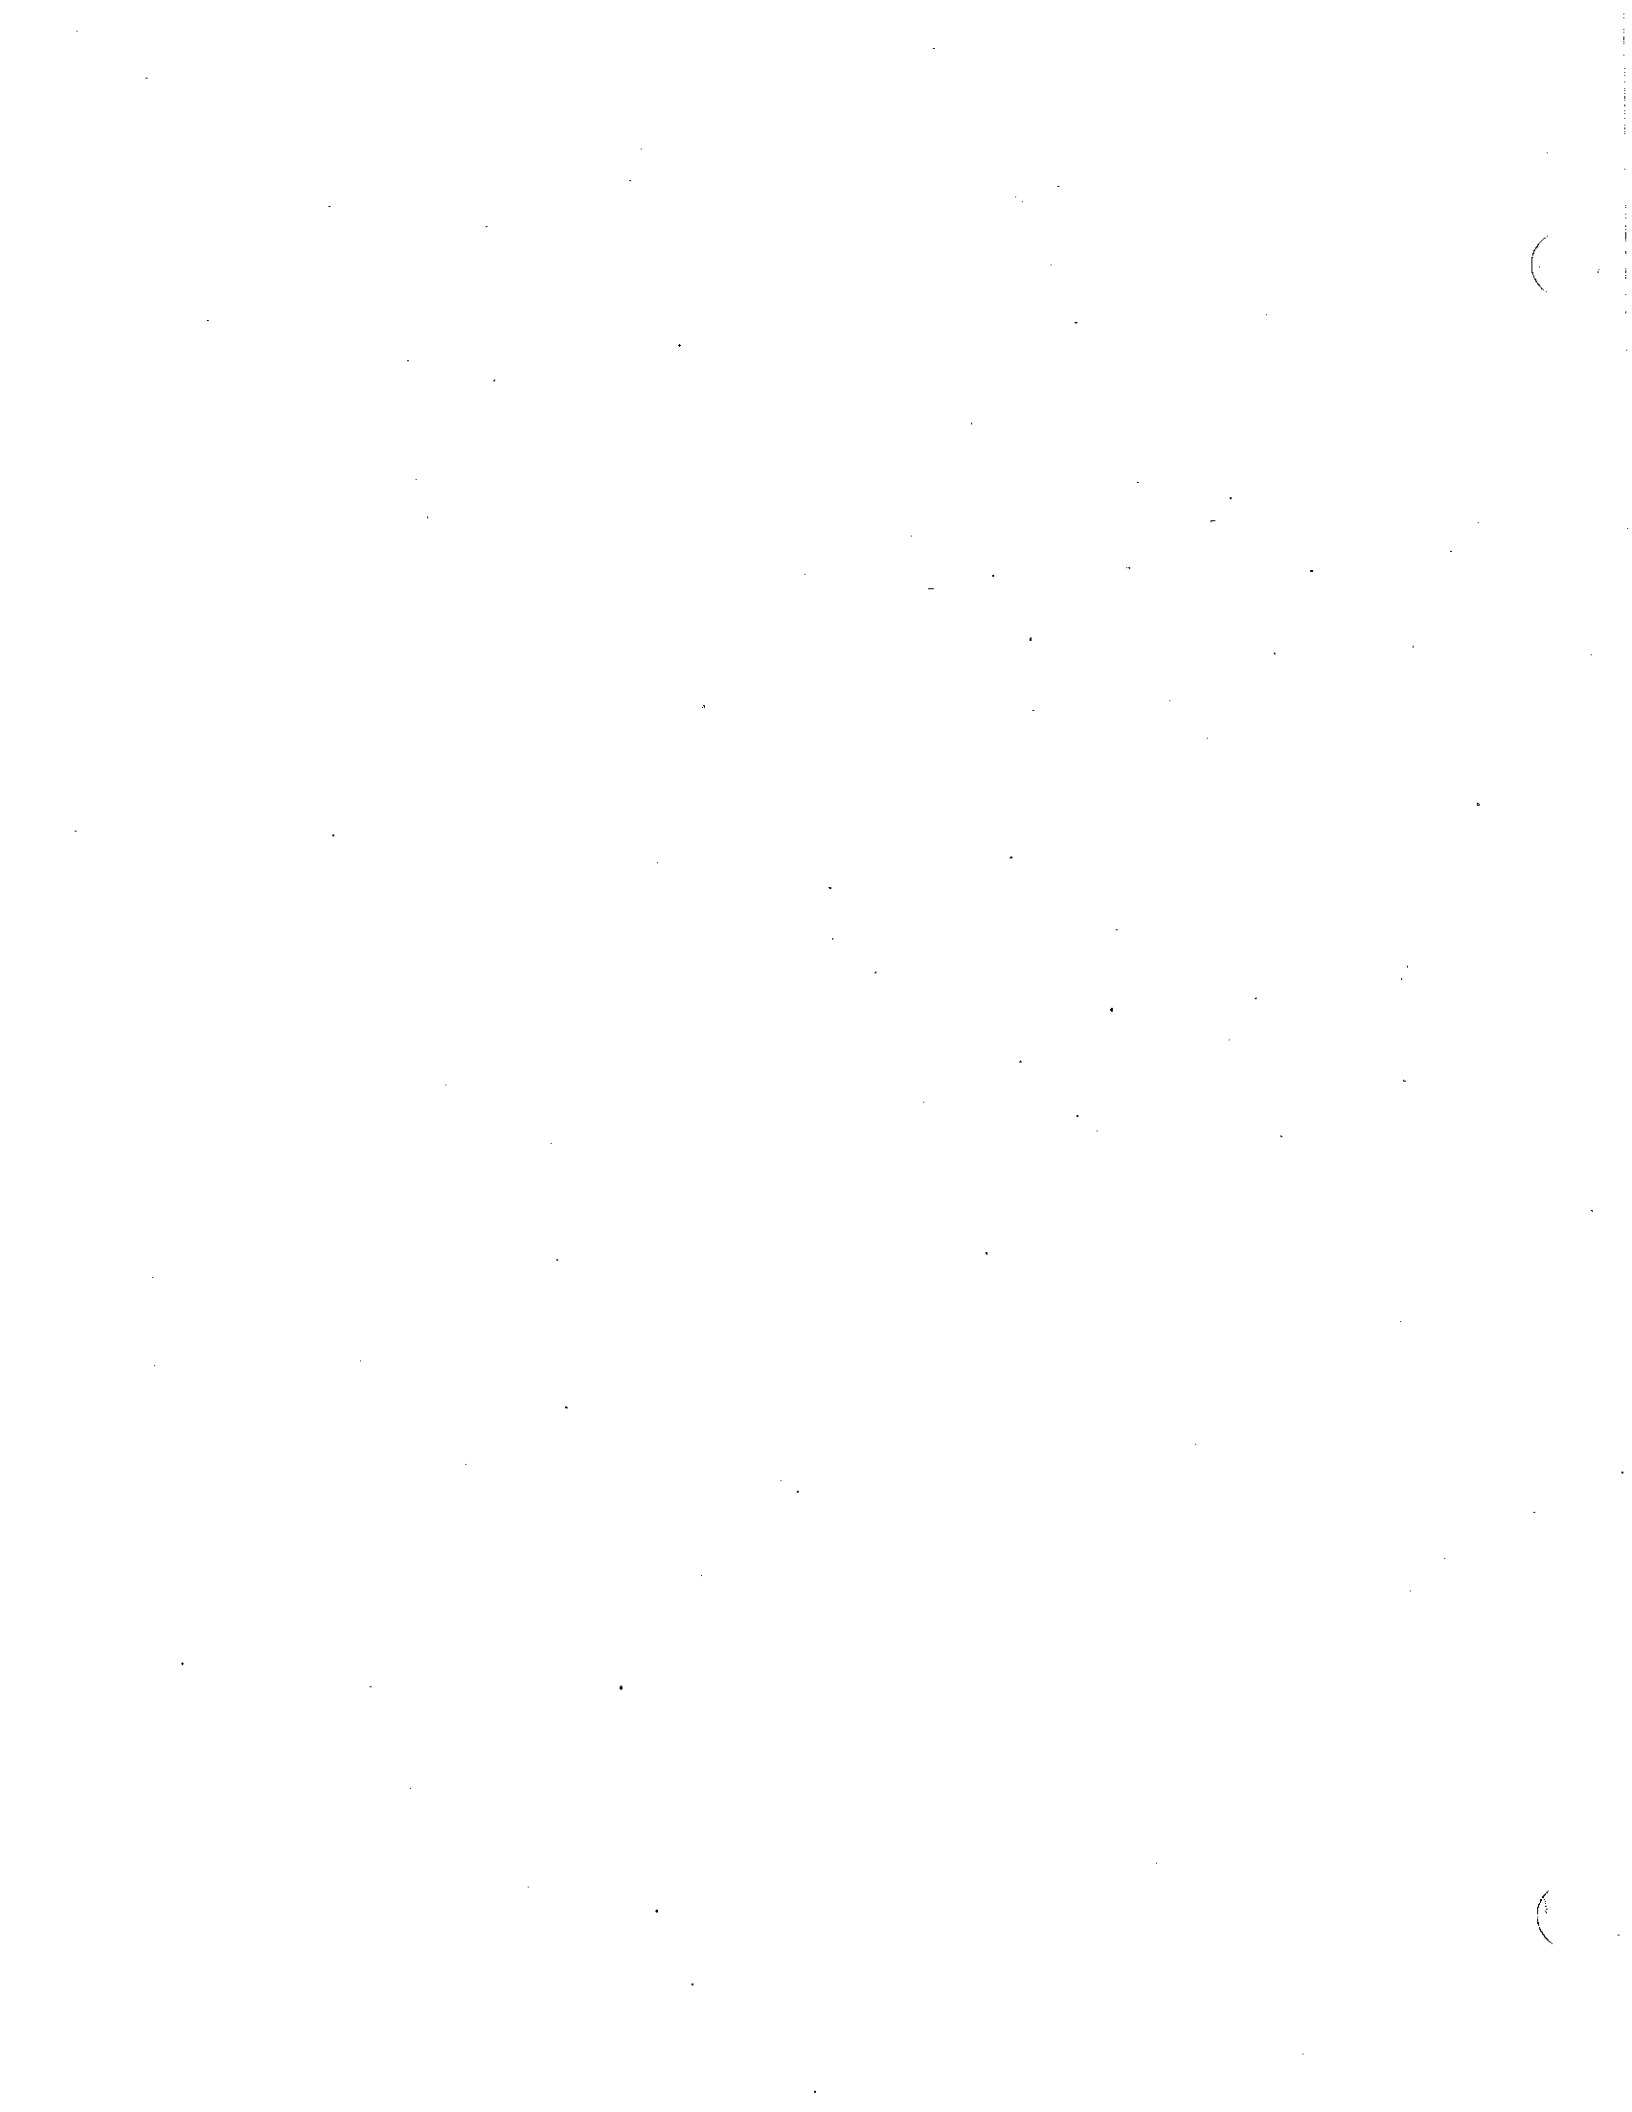

Researchers will find substantial information on Canadian development aid policies not only in the "C.I.D.A." sub-series, but also in other sub-sections of Series C, "Relations with Governmental Bodies and Other Aid Institutions", and in Series F, "Press Material and Subject Reference Files".

There is a substantial amount of information issued by various U.N. agencies, highlighting world problems such as food supply and economic inequality. Sahel drought, incipient famine in Ethiopia, information on natural disasters—all this and more one can find in this collection. Additionally, proceedings of major U.N. conferences provide another point of research interest.

The researcher will find material on various foreign and international aid organizations, as well as on projects undertaken by such organizations and on proceedings of conferences called to address development aid problems.

The Series G, "Subject Reference Files" holds much interesting information on Third World problems and how they relate to Canada. For example, the researcher can locate information on South Africa in that series, and on Canadian N.G.O. efforts to cut off investment in South Africa because of its apartheid policy and its occupation of Namibia.

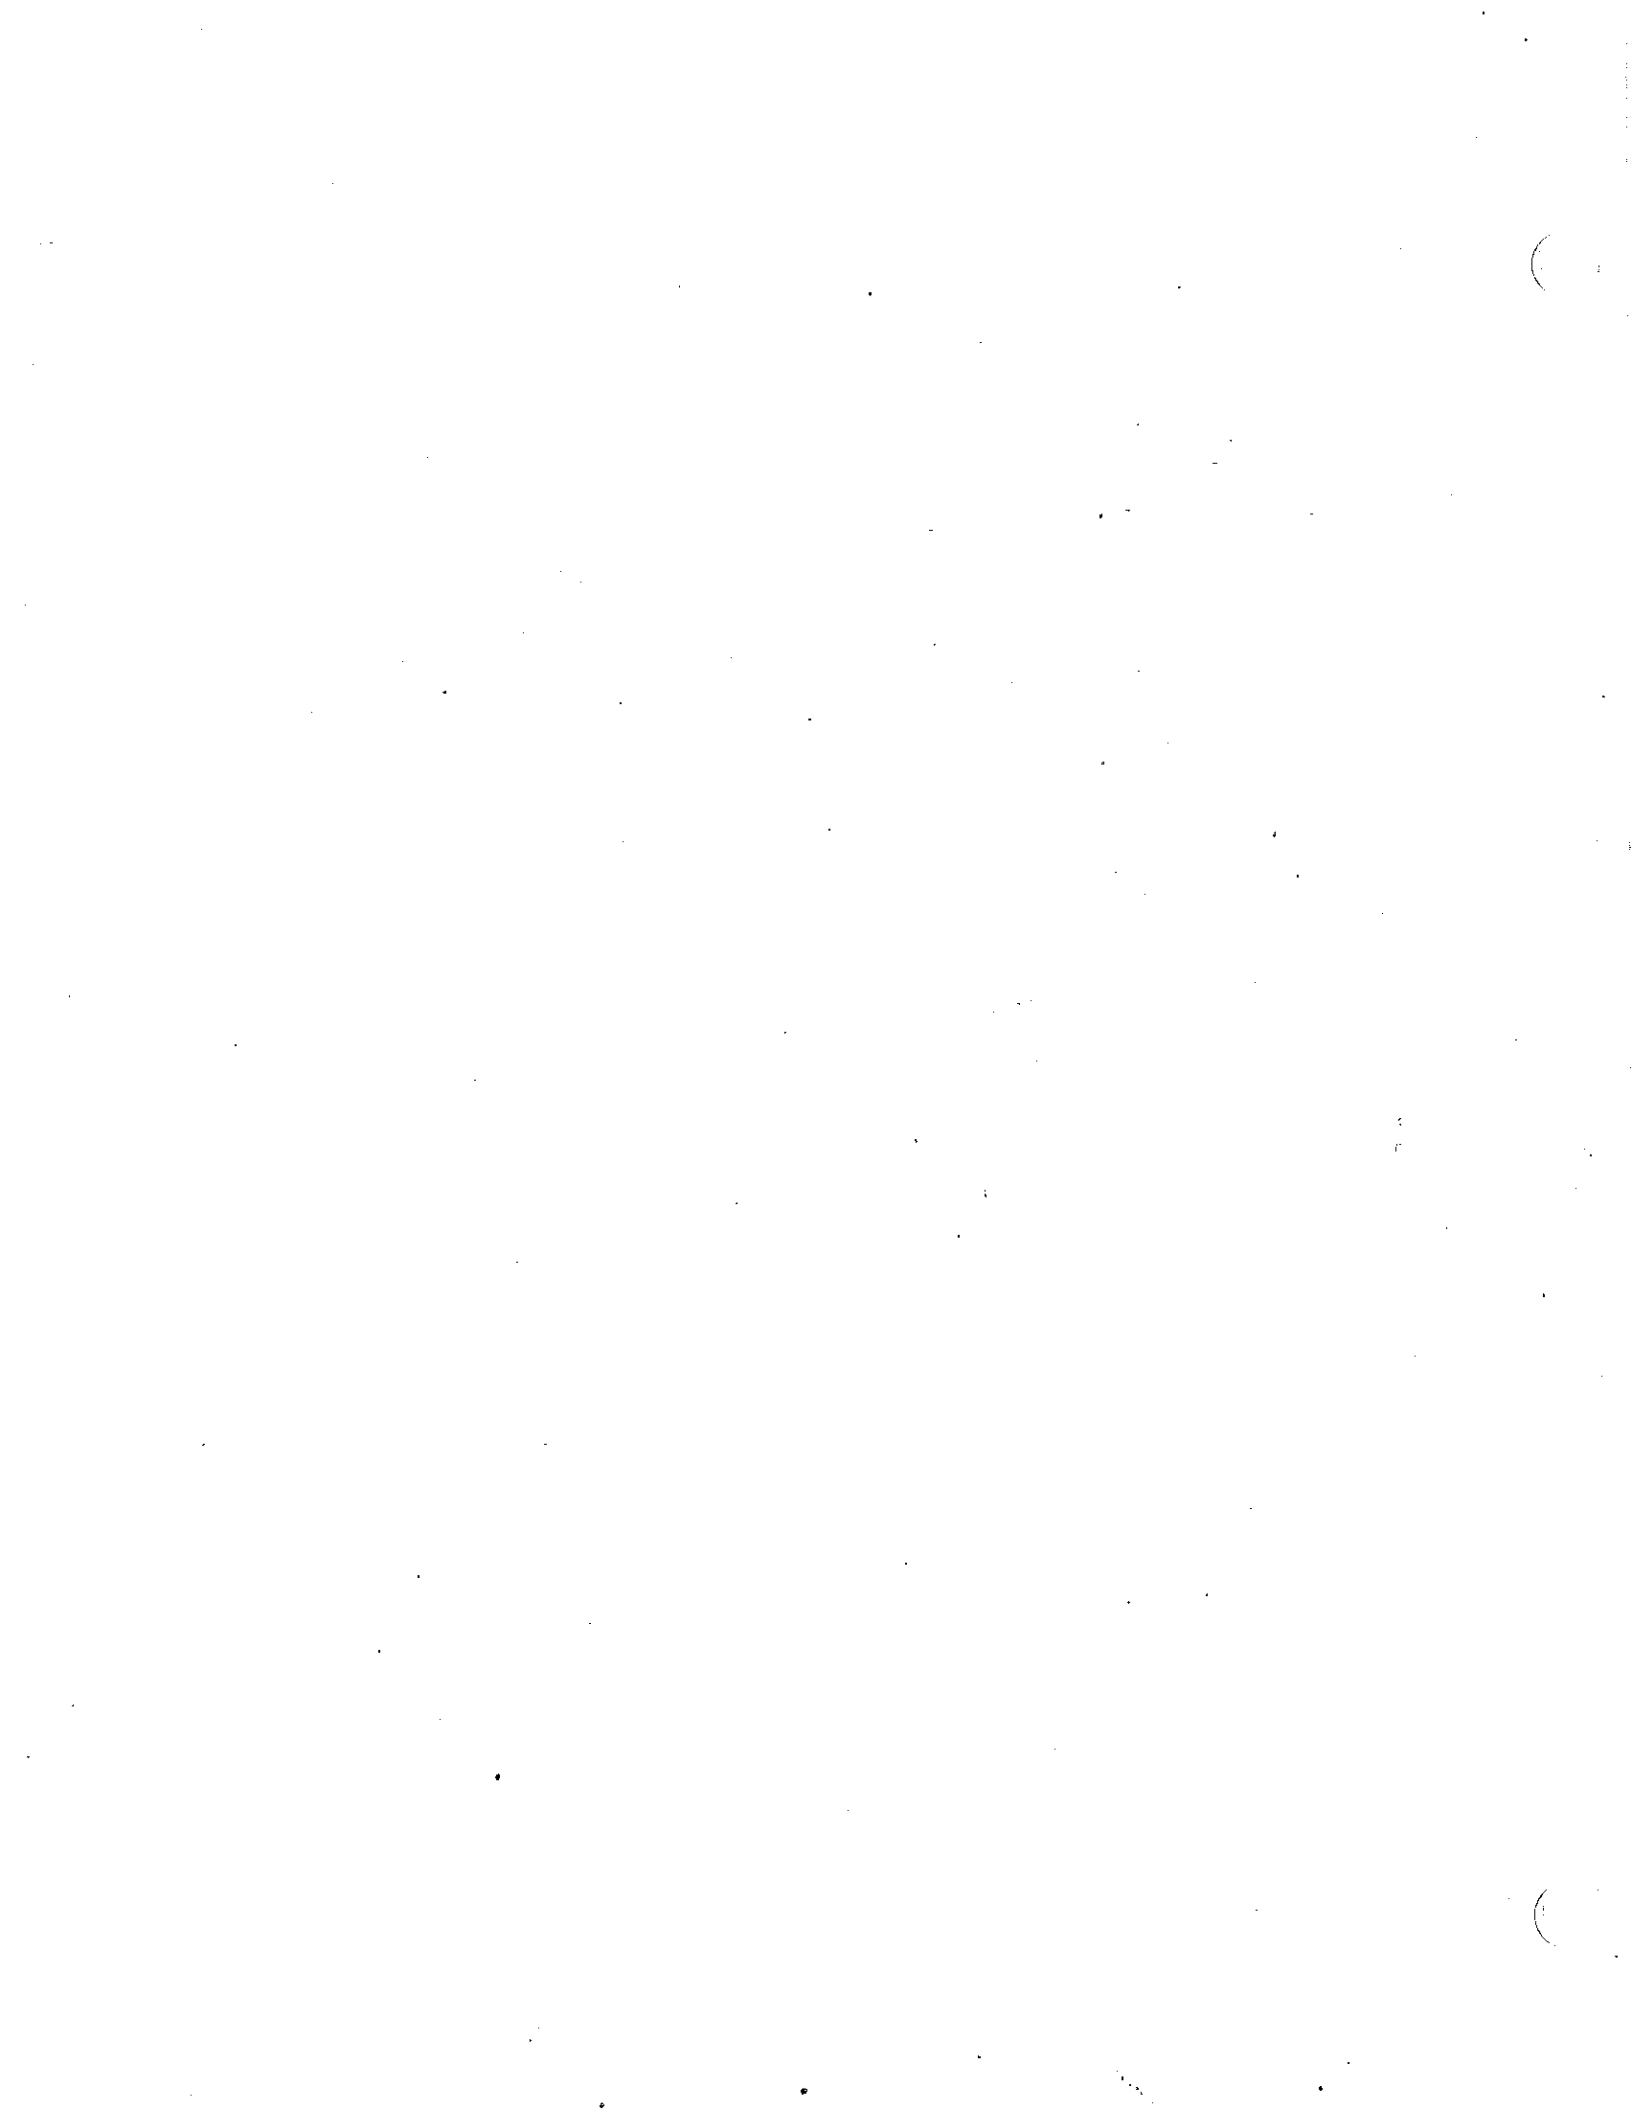

In the "Special Projects" series (Series F), the researcher can locate material of both Canadian and international concern. For example, the People's Food Commission (see also MG 28, I 375) consists of documents which reflect the latest developments in the food industry, developments which augur dramatic changes in the future.

Certain Third World countries, specially targeted for massive aid infusion, are well documented in the collection, especially in Series E, "Project Clearing House". Burundi, Pakistan, India, Bangladesh, Cape Verde and Nicaragua are so well represented in this series that area/country specialists could find such documentation valuable not only as it reflects Canadian aid efforts abroad, but also because of what it reveals of socio-economic and political conditions internally within each of the above-named countries. This same consideration, of course, applies to all the other countries/regions where Canadian aid projects were undertaken, save that the researcher will not find as much information on local, internal conditions as in the countries above-named. In fact, the collection serves as a window on the Third World, providing the researcher with fascinating, if at times all too disturbing and superficial, glimpses of life abroad.

The researcher will not, in this collection, find large and detailed information on any specific Canadian N.G.O.; for this, he must turn specifically to the independent record of each Canadian NGO itself. However, he will extract enough of a flavour, of a sense, of what each NGO is specifically designed to do, and where in the world it is in operation.
